FRENCH STIRRED AS HITLER SENDS FLEET TO SPAIN

Fear Coup May Cut Empire Lines.

Troubled Europe

European unrest continued unabated yesterday. The outstanding developments:

GREAT BRITAIN—England and France are reported to have asked soviet Russia for use of air force if war comes.

GERMANY—Nazis charge President Roosevelt is behind British agitation against dictators.

ITALY—Spokesman for Premier Mussolini announces new moves are planned by dictator states.

RUMANIA—Premier accepts and thanks Britain and France for guarantee of Rumanian independence.

BULLETIN.

WARSAW, April 15 (Saturday). —(AP)—Poland and Rumania have exchanged verbal pledges to unite in armed resistance to aggression by Germany or any possible German satellite. The two nations, allied since 1921 to protect their eastern frontiers against soviet Russia, strengthened the alliance to apply to an attack from the west.

PARIS, April 14.—If the fleet of German pocket battleships and cruisers which is reliably reported here to have sailed last night for Spain reaches its destination intact, Reichsfuehrer Hitler will have won one of the great naval battles of history without firing a shot. This is the view of experts on naval matters questioned today by THE TRIBUNE correspondent.

An official communique from Berlin declared that part of the German fleet will sail on Tuesday for spring training exercises off the Atlantic coast of Spain.

It was reported from British sources, however, and it seems to be believed in well informed circles here, that at least a few units in this fleet sailed secretly yesterday, escaping detection in the bad weather in the North Atlantic and the English channel.

[The German admiralty declared in Berlin that it was only resuming an old tradition in sending the Nazi navy to Spanish waters for training. Further, it declared that this action instead of being a threat to England and France proves that Hitler believes Europe is facing a long period of peace. Otherwise he would not have ordered the fleet on maneuvers that leave the German coast exposed to a naval attack.]

New German Strategy.

The Tribune correspondent learns that the moving of German warships to Spanish bases is a vital element in Hitler's naval strategy. It not only gives Hitler two strikes on England and France before war has been declared, but is a threat to shipping even more serious than the submarine menace in the world war.

The whole German naval plan, the Tribune correspondent learned, aims at getting the greatest part of the German fleet out of the North sea to Atlantic bases and using it for a piratical war on enemy commerce, repeating on a larger scale the exploits of the cruiser Emden and the big U-boats during the world war.

The units which left Kiel last night will be based in the Spanish ports of El Ferrol, Vigo, Santander, and Cadiz, where they will be safe from the British fleet.

Gibraltar's Fall Forecast.

It was predicted here that if war comes Italian troops will storm Gibraltar and occupy Tangier, across the strait of Gibraltar, bottling the western exit to the Mediterranean and cutting England's imperial life line.

It is considered likely that the Japanese fleet at the same time will make a lightning move threatening Singapore and Indo-China, so that the British cannot concentrate all their naval forces in the west.

Another part of the Germany navy, unless the British nip the attempt, will try to sneak out of the North sea and seize a base on the coast of Norway, from which it would be able

G. O. P. Votes Coalition on Judges

REJECTS PLEAS FOR A STRAIGHT PARTY TICKET

Slate 19 Incumbents, Drop Feinberg.

BY PERCY WOOD.

Coalition with the Democrats at the judicial election on June 5 was decided upon last night by the Cook county Republican convention. Proponents of a full G. O. P. slate fought the coalition plan for two hours, but were overwhelmingly defeated on roll call.

Accordingly, a slate composed of twelve Democrats and eight Republican candidates for the twenty places on the Circuit court is expected to be approved by the two party organizations in convention today. Nineteen of the twenty will be sitting judges. The twentieth place—alloted to the G. O. P.—may be given to Master in Chancery Julius H. Miner.

Feinberg Denied Indorsement.

Miner, one report said, will take the place of Judge Michael Feinberg, who was denied indorsement by the Republicans last night. The convention withheld its approval of Feinberg after Committeemen Oscar De Priest [3d] and William E. King [2d], both colored, asserted that Judge Feinberg had been ruthless, prejudiced, and hostile to Negro litigants in his court.

Another reason for his being dropped was said to lie in a disagreement with his original sponsor, former State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe.

There were reports last night that Judge Feinberg's name might be put back on the slate today. Some of his friends predicted that the Democrats would insist on it.

In addition to the entire Circuit court, one full term and five vacancies on the Superior court are to be filled in June. Republicans, it was reported, will be given two of the vacancies, and the advance gossip indicated that these places would go to Committeemen John T. Dempsey [33d], and former Municipal Judge John A. Sbarbaro.

Slate for Superior Court.

Judge Grover C. Niemeyer of the Superior court, a Democrat whose term expires in June, is slated to receive the Democratic indorsement for the full term. For the remaining three Democratic places many names were mentioned.

Among them were Ald. Roger J. Kiley [37th], Municipal Judge Joseph A. Graber, former Ald. Ulysses S. Schwartz [4th], Municipal Judges Francis Borrelli and Frank M. Padden, and Attorneys John Bolton and Milton Smith.

Reslated by the Republicans for the Circuit court bench last night were the following seven sitting judges: George Fred Rush, Kickham Scanlan, David F. Matchett, Stanley H. Klarkowski, Hugo M. Friend, Daniel P. Trude, and William V. Brothers.

Democrats on Coalition List.

The following Democratic Circuit court judges will be added to the coalition slate by the Democrats:

Frank H. Bicek, Joseph Burke, John R. Caverly, Robert Jerome Dunne, Benjamin P. Epstein, Philip J. Finnegan, Harry M. Fisher, Cornelius J. Harrington, Walter J. La

SOMETHING NEW TO PLAY WITH

Parker and Pal Found Guilty in Fake Bills Plot

Frank Parker, brewery owner and one time airplane bootlegger, and August Englehardt were convicted last night by a federal district court jury of conspiracy to possess and pass counterfeit money. Englehardt was found guilty also of possessing counterfeit currency.

Frank Parker.

Each of the defendants could be sentenced to a maximum of two years in prison and fined $10,000 on the conspiracy conviction. Englehardt, who is already serving a counterfeiting sentence in Terminal Island federal prison in California, could receive as much as fifteen years additional and another fine of $10,000 on the possession count.

Pair File New Trial Plea.

A new trial was requested by the defendants. Federal Judge Charles E. Woodward set arguments on this motion for next Saturday. The judge will decide today whether Parker's bond shall be raised from $5,000 to $15,000. This was demanded by Assistant District Attorney A. Bradley Eben. Englehardt, as a federal prisoner, will remain in the county jail until sentence is imposed.

Both men took the verdict stoically, but Parker announced with determination that he would appeal it. The jury was out more than eight hours.

Testimony in the trial showed that secret service agents found $17,880 of the counterfeit bills buried in fruit jars near the fifteenth green of the Tam O' Shanter golf course in Niles. They located the cache, the agents said, by following a map that was drawn by Englehardt for Parker's guidance.

Correspondence Convicts Them.

Correspondence between the two men, in which the fifteenth green, the trees surrounding it, and fruit jars were mentioned, was introduced.

The government also produced a witness, Frank Hicketts, ex-convict and former employé of Parker, who asserted Parker tried to get him to help market the spurious currency.

Parker, 43 years old, was sentenced to prison in 1913 as an accessory to burglary and was paroled from Joliet in eleven months. Later he was sent back as a parole violator and served three more years. A pardon issued by Gov. Len Small restored his citizenship.

In the trial he testified he operated three distilleries in Canada in 1925, but denied he ever bootlegged in the United States. He now owns the Bismarck and Roosevelt breweries.

LINDBERGH ARRIVES IN U. S. WITH FROWN AND POLICE ESCORT

New York, April 14.—(AP)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh arrived here tonight on the liner Aquitania on his first visit to his American homeland in more than a year. His cabin was locked against a curious throng, with police standing guard outside, as the ship docked.

Agents of the line said the flyer wished to keep his customary silence and had no statement to make concerning his plans while here. Lindbergh left the ship surrounded by police, who pushed through a crowd of several hundred persons gathered to greet him. Frowning perceptibly, he left in an automobile for the Englewood, N. J., estate of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow.

A passenger said Lindbergh and the former Barbara Hutton, estranged wife of the Danish count, Kurt Haugwitz-Reventlow, and, like the aviator, a voluntary exile from the United States, sat together for a time in the ship's lounge this afternoon. The countess was accompanied by her son Lance, 3 years old.

The Boys Have a Hot Time at a Stag Show

A hot time was planned last night in the Sokol Jonas hall at 5510 West 25th street, Cicero. The affair was a stag show.

About 2,000 men, who paid $1.25 admission each, packed the hall to see what they could see. They knew what is supposed to happen at stag shows and invisioned dancing girls of shapely contour and negative raiment.

Then a lady master of ceremonies appeared on the stage.

"The original show has been canceled," she announced. "We will present another show that we hope you'll like."

Spectators Howl Disapproval.

There were howls of derision and disapproval from the 2,000 spectators. But what they didn't know, and what the stag sponsors, Cicero post, No. 196, of the American Legion, did know, was that police were in the house.

Also the sponsors knew that Jack Brown, chief investigator for the Rev. Philip Yarrow's Illinois Vigilance association, was among those present.

A few days ago some one wrote the Rev. Mr. Yarrow and told him of the plans for the stag. Yarrow notified Sherif O'Brien and the Cicero police. Thus, as the crowd gathered last night, Lieut. Fred Mulhausen and three county highway policemen and several Cicero policemen were on hand.

Hula-Hula Dancer Booed.

As the crowd shouted for action a hula-hula dancer appeared on the stage. She was booed off. Then came an acrobatic dancer. She, too, fared badly, as did other dancers. Even the eight piece orchestra was driven off the stage.

Finally the affair turned into a riot. The disappointed spectators broke windows, threw hot dog sandwiches and beer—which were free—on the floor, and smashed about fifty folding chairs.

One spectator yelled "Let's take the chairs home." And about 100 spectators carried their chairs from the hall.

Investigator Brown of the Vigilance association charged police should have made arrests. Lieut. Mulhausen disagreed.

The show, he said, was bum, but it wasn't naughty.

Act to Outlaw Strike Abuses in Minnesota

Minneapolis, Minn., April 14.—[Special.]—A drastic labor relations bill designed to end industrial strife in Minnesota was passed by the senate late today. The legislation is similar to that enacted or pending in a constantly growing group of states which now include Wisconsin, Michigan, Illinois, and Oregon.

Gov. H. E. Stassen, for strike abuse law.

The senate measure outlaws sitdown strikes, restricts picketing and closed shop agreements, and requires thirty days' notice of strikes involving public conveniences. It was sent to conference for adjustment of differences with a labor bill passed by the house two weeks ago.

Aimed at Terrorism.

The proposed law is aimed at terrorism and strike abuses which have marked Minnesota's labor history for years. There have been numerous killings in the bloody strike frays that have been waged in Minneapolis by irresponsible groups of labor agitators who were permitted to run amuck during Minnesota's radical Farmer-Labor administrations.

A complete breakdown of law enforcement occurred during truck drivers' strikes in 1934. The National Guard was called out by the late Floyd B. Olson, then governor, but the rioting continued even under martial law. Two men were killed in those strikes and two more died in labor violence here the following year.

Late in 1937 Patrick J. Corcoran, a power in the truck drivers' unions, was ambushed and killed, apparently in a struggle for control of the unions. Six months later William S. Brown, president of the General Drivers' union No. 544, was shot to death in another one of the Twin Cities' bloody labor wars.

Most of the killings remained unsolved, as have the slayings of two Twin Cities weekly newspaper publishers—Walter Liggett and Howard Guilford—whose papers dealt with strike and vice problems.

The wholesale shedding of blood and other wanton acts of violence which occurred during the régimes of Olson, the Farmer Labor radical, and his successor, Elmer Benson, aroused a rising tide of opinion that gangland was in the saddle in Minneapolis through the connivance of politics.

The determination of Minnesota farmers to halt the series of assaults by gangsters and desperado unionists, and particularly to combat racketeering against agriculture, was largely responsible for the present labor legislation sought under the state's new Republican governor, Harold E. Stassen.

What Legislation Provides.

Major provisions of the bills passed by both houses of the legislature provide for the following:

Thirty days' notice before calling strikes or lockouts involving public conveniences. Ten days notice in ordinary strikes and lockouts. No picketing of a firm where a strike is not in existence. Virtual prohibition of closed shop agreements. Picket lines to contain a majority of persons on strike. Establishment of arbitration and conciliation machinery.

Three amendments adopted this afternoon by the senate changed its measure considerably from the contents of the house bill. The first amendment, sponsored by the rural bloc, would make it unlawful to interfere with the use of public roads.

The second one struck out a section designed to penalize strikers who violate the "unlawful acts" code merely by keeping them from public relief for six months.

Unlawful Acts Listed.

The third amendment listed as unlawful acts almost all the stipulations designated as unfair practices and made violators subject to prosecution under the state penal code instead of merely being deprived of relief.

Among the unlawful acts listed were sitdown strikes, picketing by persons not involved in strikes, picketing where no strike is in progress, interference with vehicular operation, coercion in labor union organization, discrimination against union members, spying on employés, and the maintenance of black lists.

PAROLEE HACKS SPONSOR'S WIFE IN FARM HOME

Crushes Her Skull; Flees in Truck.

BULLETIN.

The truck in which Vivian Denton fled after his hatchet attack on Mrs. Meta Christiansen was found late last night in highway 64, about fifteen miles west of Sycamore in Ogle county. It is believed to have been abandoned about 6 p. m. Although the young fugitive got a good start on his pursuers, sherifs and deputies of three counties—Ogle, Kane, and De Kalb—centered their search in the area west of Sycamore. Farm lands were being scoured early today. The abandoned truck was discovered at 9 p. m. by Merle Halsey of De Kalb, who notified Chief Joseph Jacobson of Rochelle, the nearest town. Earlier it was reported erroneously that the truck had been abandoned near Virgil in Kane county.

Less than four hours after he had been paroled yesterday from the St. Charles Training School for Boys, a young thief attacked the wife of his parole sponsor with a hatchet and left her near death in her farm home, a mile and a half from the school. Then he stole a truck parked in the farmyard and escaped.

The fugitive is Vivian Denton, 17 years old, of Momence, in Kankakee county, the son of a WPA worker. He was sent to St. Charles a year ago for theft and delinquency.

A posse of sherifs, special deputies, and state police hunted him last night near Maple Park, Ill.

Victim's Skull Fractured.

His victim is Mrs. Meta Christiansen, 77 years old, wife of Chris Christiansen, a well to do farmer, living two miles west of Geneva. Her skull was fractured in four places by hatchet blows. Physicians at the Geneva Community hospital said last night it is unlikely she will recover.

The attack apparently occurred at about 1 p. m., and Mrs. Christiansen was unconscious for approximately an hour before help reached her.

Her husband, who has been giving jobs to St. Charles parolees for nearly thirty years, had made application for a new boy early in the week to replace one who disappeared Monday. Yesterday at 10 a. m. an employé of the school appeared with young Denton.

Christiansen talked with Denton outside the house and decided he would do. He then took Denton inside and introduced him to his wife. After the noon meal, which the three had together, Christiansen left for Batavia on business.

Woman Describes Attack.

What happened then was told to Deputy Sherif Cecil Reilly of Kane county by Mrs. Christiansen during her brief periods of consciousness after the attack.

"I was at the sink washing the dinner dishes," she said. "The boy walked up behind me. He didn't say anything. I started to turn around and he grabbed me by the throat and choked me.

"I pushed him and fought him away. He came back, but I fought him off again. He began to hit me on the head with something. I don't know what it was. The blood was blinding me but I still fought him. [One of the hatchet blows struck Mrs. Christiansen just over the right eye, fracturing the skull and damaging the eyeball].

"I fell down. When I came to he was gone and I got to the phone and managed to call some one."

Telephones to Doctor.

A trail of blood led from the sink to the telephone stand. Reaching the phone, Mrs. Christiansen succeeded in calling Dr. F. M. Marstiller of Geneva.

"Come quickly, doctor," she said. "I am hurt. This is Mrs. Christiansen."

Dr. Marstiller hurried to the farm, but found the doors locked. He knocked repeatedly and on receiving no answer concluded he had misunderstood his caller's name, or had been the victim of a prank, and drove back to Geneva.

Inside the farmhouse Mrs. Christiansen had fallen unconscious into a chair. When her senses returned she reached for the phone again and called her daughter, Mrs. Emma Peterson, 50 years old, who lives on a farm near Wasco with her husband, Clarence.

"Come over; come over," the injured woman whispered. "I'm hurt."

The Petersons arrived, accompanied by their daughter, Mrs. Helen Johnson, 24 years old. They saw Mrs. Christiansen through a window. She managed to unlock the door for them. As Mrs. Peterson bent over her mother, the elderly woman said:

"The kid did it—the kid from the school."

It was then about an hour after the attack. A neighbor, A. R. Johnson, told Sheriff Marcus W. Damisch and Deputy Reilly he had seen a youth he did not know drive the farmer's truck into the highway at about 1:30 p. m. and head west. Johnson thought nothing of this, however, as he knew Christiansen planned to give work to a new parolee from St. Charles.

On a report early in the evening that the truck had been found, sheriffs' forces of Kane and De Kalb county, augmented by state police and special deputies, were concentrated near Maple Park, near the Kane-De Kalb line. Roads were blockaded and put under guard in a radius of twenty miles. As the cordon began moving toward the center of the circle, however, it was found that the truck was not Christiansen's.

May Have Taken Arms.

It was suspected that Denton might have taken firearms and money when he fled the home.

Deputy Sheriff Reilly ordered the Christiansen kitchen left in the same disorder in which it was found. If Denton is captured, the deputy said, a glimpse of the scene of the crime as he left it may hasten a confession. The hatchet the parolee used was found in a storeroom adjoining the kitchen.

Denton has had a record of delinquency since childhood, according to Policeman Ira Metcalf of Momence. Metcalf said that a brother of Denton is a prisoner at the Vandalia prison farm.

Placed in Foster Home.

Metcalf said that because Denton's home life had been blamed for his waywardness, juvenile authorities had put the boy in a foster home several years ago. He was sent to St. Charles April 8, 1938, when he climaxed a career of vandalism and theft by stealing some clothes and a pistol from the family with which he lived.

An unruly boy in the institution, he emulated other young desperadoes by walking away from the unwalled school last June 20. Captured and returned, he improved his behavior until it was deemed safe to parole him. He was regarded as an intelligent youth.

Denton was sent to the Christiansen farm on the customary parole terms. Christiansen was to pay the school $15 a month wages for his work, deducting $1.25 a week that he was to pay the boy directly as spending money, and making further deductions for clothes the boy might need. Any surplus was to be placed to Denton's credit at the school. Forty of the school's boys are working on farms under similar arrangements.

One of 11 Children.

Denton is one of eleven children, from 11 months to 21 years in age, all of whom except Denton and his prisoner brother live with their parents in a three room shack on the Kankakee river in Momence.

Except for a lean-to kitchen, the shack was jammed with beds. Most of the children were bare from the waist up. Police said the family had moved to the house from a tent a month ago.

Young Denton is 5 feet 6 inches tall and weighs 136 pounds. He has black hair and blue eyes.

The boy who worked at the Christiansen farm before Denton was Herbert Reet, 18 years old. Last Sunday he returned to the St. Charles school and said he had been locked out of the Christiansen home Saturday night. School officials presumed that he had been locked out by accident and kept him over Sunday. On Monday they told him to go back to the farm. He started, but never arrived. No trace of him has been found.

JUVENILE JUDGE DENIES BLAME IN ST. CHARLES ROW

Bicek Says School Head at Fault in Escapes.

BY GEORGE WRIGHT.

Judge Frank H. Bicek of the Circuit court, who supplies half the inmates to the unwalled St. Charles Training School for Boys, scene of innumerable escapes and scandals in recent years, yesterday defended his policies as steward of the Juvenile court, to which he is assigned. The judge said he has made it a practice to try every other method of reformation for youthful offenders before sending them to the institution.

The judge, a candidate for reelection, has been blamed by the St. Charles school authorities for sending unruly and tough criminals to the school—criminals who have caused the residents in the Fox river valley adjoining the institution to live in constant fear of burglary, robbery, and rape. The judge hurled the blame right back at Capt. William T. Harmon, managing officer at St. Charles, and his staff. Judge Bicek said it is Harmon's job to keep the inmates in check.

Calls St. Charles Only Choice.

Judge Bicek does not believe in jailing youths for their first crime or delinquency. It is not until the second offense, the judge says, that youthful criminals should be punished by sending them to the unwalled institution. If they escape from it, he adds, that is not his fault, but the fault of the institution, which is supposed to incarcerate them.

"We have no other institution to which we can send these delinquents and criminals," said the judge. "We exhaust every other means before we consider institutional placement at St. Charles."

The judge was asked why more of the youths who have committed felonies are not turned over by the Juvenile court to the Criminal court for trial, so that upon conviction they could be sent to a walled institution.

Defends Juvenile Procedure.

"We could send all crime cases to the Criminal court where the defendant is over 10 years of age," said the judge. "But if we did that there would be no work for this court. Judge Denis E. Sullivan tried to force us to do that when he was chief justice of the Criminal court some years back. He failed. I think the thing is wrong. We are here to do that work."

He declared, however, that the state's attorney has the right to secure an indictment in any criminal case.

"The question at St. Charles seems to be whether the institution is for dependent or delinquent boys," said the judge. "We do not send dependents to the institution. Under the law St. Charles is a place for delinquents and ought to be treated as such.

"I understand a small group of forty or fifty of the inmates disrupts the institution. It is up to the managing officer to handle them. If he is unable to meet the problem he should give some one else a chance."

School Staff Blames Courts.

Capt. Harmon and his assistants have repeatedly placed the blame for conditions at St. Charles on the fact that the Juvenile court sends them only young felons who are beyond control.

Judge Bicek originally gained his judicial position by appointment from Gov. Horner to fill a vacancy. He was a protégé of the late Mayor Cermak at the time he was appointed on Jan. 26, 1933. He was elected to a full six year term in June of that year, and immediately was assigned to the Juvenile court branch.

Judge Bicek spent many years on the public pay rolls before his election to a judgeship. He was a clerk for Q. J. Chott, justice of the peace and police magistrate from 1903 to 1906 while securing his legal education at the Illinois College of Law, from which he was graduated in 1907.

In 1913 Judge Bicek was appointed chief deputy clerk and acting chief clerk of the Probate court. In 1925 he became a master in chancery in the Circuit court. He was an unsuccessful candidate for Municipal court judge in 1932.

The judge, who handles 10,000 cases involving children each year, is the father of a grown daughter. He handles more than 2,000 cases of delinquent boys each year.

Chicago's Record Since Jan. 1

Ex-Inmates of St. Charles Confess Dixon Burglaries

Dixon, Ill., April 14.—[Special.]—State's Attorney Edward A. Jones announced today that Harold Walls, 18 years old, and Edward Helfrich, 16, had confessed a series of burglaries which took place in Dixon during the last six months. The youths, who live in Dixon and have been held in the Lee county jail since April 5, are former inmates of St. Charles School for Boys. They will be arraigned before County Judge Grover W. Gehant tomorrow morning.

A GIRL'S SHARP MEMORY LANDS 2 SHARPERS IN JAIL

Edgar L. Brown, 62 years old, and Oliver England, 21, had a pretty good scheme for paying their bills with bogus checks but the memory of Miss Helen Ganos, a clerk in a grocery at 3909 Cottage Grove avenue, proved their downfall.

On March 25 two men cashed a bogus $10 check in the store. On April 8 Miss Ganos saw the two men in a drug store at 61st street and Cottage Grove avenue. She followed them to tavern and then called police. Detectives Emmett Murphy and Grover Mullaney arrested the two—Brown and England.

They confessed they had passed eighty $10 checks in the last six months. Yesterday the grand jury was reported to have voted true bills charging the pair with confidence game. Both are being held in the County jail.

NAB EX-INMATE OF ALCATRAZ IN STORE HOLDUP

George Ballin, 28 years old, said to be an ex-convict, was arrested by Austin police last night after he had held up the Pioneer Army store at 4121 North avenue.

Armed with a revolver, he menaced the manager, a clerk, and a customer, and took $25. As Ballin fled, James Portman, the manager, called police. Policemen Frank Horak and Edward Considine, notified by radio, nabbed Ballin a block away.

Ballin, who gave his address as 1435 Fullerton avenue, told his captors that he had served eight years for a postal robbery in Chillicothe, O., spending part of his sentence at Alcatraz.

WIDOW AND SONS ARE DENIED $20,000 INSURANCE CLAIM

Judge Philip L. Sullivan in federal District court yesterday held invalid the claim of Mrs. Julia Obartuch to collect $20,000 on two life insurance policies of her husband, Frank, who died in 1934. The judge held that the attempt of the Obartuch family to collect the insurance constituted a fraud.

The claim was directed against the Security Mutual Life Insurance company of Binghamton, N. Y., which contested payment of the two $10,000 policies. W. L. Bourland, attorney for the insurance company, accused two sons of Obartuch of fraudulently insuring their father, then beating him severely, and finally allowing him to die in poverty.

The two sons he named are Michael, an attorney, and Henry, an undertaker, who have offices at 2123 Cermak road. Bourland said the policies had been issued in 1931 after a man, other than Obartuch, had been given the usual medical examination.

A contempt citation against Michael Obartuch as the result of an alleged death threat against a witness for the insurance company will be heard Monday by Judge Sullivan. The witness is A. J. Friedman, an agent for the company, who sold the two policies.

OUT OF FRYING PAN INTO JAIL.

For throwing a skillet of hot lard at his landlady during an argument Thursday night, Charles Erostaboz, 4504 South Paulina street, a WPA worker, was sent to the Bridewell for fifteen days yesterday by Judge Gibson E. Gorman.

FATE OF PROWLER SUSPECT HINGES ON A SHIRT TAIL

The fate of Stanley Malec of 1335 47th street hinges on his shirt tail, it appeared yesterday when Malec was taken into Felony court on a charge of burglary.

Police explained: The crime detection laboratory is making tests to match a piece of shirt tail caught on the window sill in a grocery at 945 Garfield boulevard when a burglar was routed March 24 by Alex Sinetos, the owner. Sinetos fired at the prowler with a shot gun.

Shortly afterward, Malec, wearing a torn shirt and with a shot gun wound in his left elbow, walked into the New City police station and said he had been shot. Police held him.

PLEADS GUILTY TO SLAYING PAIR; GETS LIFE TERM

Franklin, Ind., April 14.—(AP)—Clifford Redmond, 27 years old, a farm hand, charged with the slaying of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Brand in their farm home near Edinburg March 1, made a surprise appearance in court here today, pleaded guilty to premeditated murder, and was sentenced by Circuit Judge Charles B. Staff to life imprisonment in Indiana state prison.

Prosecutor Scott Moser told how the Brands were shot and beaten as they slept and how an attempt was made to rape their 12 year old daughter, Gloria Ann.

He described how Gloria Ann, her brother, Tommy, 11, and sister, Judith, 4, huddled together six hours in the farmhouse until daylight.

SLATTERY NAMED SENATOR; TAKES SEAT NEXT WEEK

Schwartz Slated to Get Commission Post.

BY PERCY WOOD.

James M. Slattery, appointed by Gov. Horner yesterday to succeed the late United States Senator James Hamilton Lewis, plans to take his seat late next week. He will await the appointment of his successor as chairman of the Illinois commerce commission before going to Washington.

Charles K. Schwartz.

The governor's friends believe he will appoint Tax Commissioner Charles K. Schwartz of Chicago to head the commerce board. Schwartz, with Senator Designate Slattery, was co-leader of the Horner forces in Cook county during the last three years.

Senator Lewis' term would have expired at the November, 1942 election. Slattery's appointment is until November, 1940, under the legal provision that an appointee to a senatorial vacancy can serve only until the next congressional election.

Boyhood Friend of Mayor.

The new senator is a reserved and soft spoken man nearing 61. He is a lawyer and a native Chicagoan. Born in the "Archey road" district, he lived in the vicinity of 26th and Wallace streets as a young man. This region has produced a number of political leaders, including Mayor Kelly, who was Slattery's boyhood friend.

Within two hours after his appointment was made public in Springfield, Slattery passed out copies of a statement in the commerce commission's offices, 160 North La Salle street. He said the statement contained all he would have to say about his new job —"until I go to Washington and get my feet on the ground."

"I intend as senator from Illinois," the statement read, "to do all in my power to help advance the great humanitarian principles and objectives of the Democratic national administration."

Senator-Designate Slattery said he was deeply grateful to the governor for the appointment and accepted it as a tremendous responsibility.

One of the first to congratulate Slattery was his senatorial colleague, Senator Scott W. Lucas, who telephoned from Washington. Lucas was nominated and elected last year with Horner backing. Slattery managed his Cook county campaign.

Father of Eleven.

Slattery lives at 1522 Farwell avenue. He is the father of eleven children—ten by his first wife, who died, and one by the present Mrs. Slattery.

Slattery was born July 29, 1878, and attended St. Ignatius college and the Illinois College of Law. He was admitted to the practice of law in 1908. For a time he was on the faculty of the Webster College of Law, during the period when his predecessor, Senator Lewis, was its president.

The senator-designate was for eight years an assistant attorney for the sanitary district and later was superintendent of public service for the Cook county board. In 1933 the governor appointed him attorney for the Lincoln park board and the following year, when park consolidation was voted, he became the first general attorney for the Chicago park district. He resigned in 1936 to head the commerce commission.

HOPES OF ICKES DASHED

Slattery's appointment was expected. Others, however, nursed hopes of getting it. Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, for one, made it plain several days ago in an interview that he was receptive.

Observers in Springfield held that an amusing feud between Ickes and Horner eliminated whatever chance, if any, Ickes had to get the plum. The friction began early in 1933, just after Horner's inauguration. Ickes called at the statehouse with congratulations and suggestions, but at that time he was only the husband of a Republican state representative, the late Anna Wilmarth Ickes, and he was allowed to cool his heels and failed to see the governor.

Then, a few months later, the political table was turned. Ickes became secretary of the interior and the powerful PWA money dispenser. In November of 1933 he repaid the Horner effront by criticizing the governor for not awarding road contracts fast enough to suit Ickes and the New Deal burocracy.

Keeps the Governor Waiting.

It was also said that Ickes took another slap at the governor by keeping him waiting for hours when Horner went to Washington in April, 1935, to ask for easy money.

Thus did the governor "go to Canossa and make his penance, but all he got was what the elephant forgot," one astute political commentator said. [The Canossa reference concerns Emperor Henry IV. of the old Holy Roman empire, who walked barefoot to the castle of that name in 1077 and begged Pope Gregory VII. to lift his sentence of excommunication. There is a proverb that "women and elephants never forget anything." Thus what the elephant forgot is nothing.]

STORY A MODEL ONE, AND SAM'S STUCK WITH IT

Seized on Complaint of Girl Job Seekers.

The way Sam Brodman told the story yesterday, he just wanted to get acquainted with some nice girls.

But Frances Hightower and Betty Scrol, models, had a different version when they confronted him at the sex offense bureau in the central police building.

Police learned that Brodman, who is 29 years old, came here from New York City six months ago and telephoned the models' union at 54 West Randolph street. He said he planned to open a dress shop and would like to have some girls sent to his room in the Congress hotel to discuss their qualifications as models.

Many Come; None Is Chosen.

More than twenty girls were sent to Brodman's rooms in the Congress and Ambassador West hotels in the six months. None was hired. Miss Hightower and Miss Scrol found out why.

They went to Brodman's room in the Congress a month ago. He discussed salaries and working conditions with them.

"Then he asked us to take off everything but our underthings, so he might get a better idea of our qualifications," said Miss Hightower. "Betty and I refused and left. He telephoned me later and asked me to visit him again, saying I was the best fitted of the models he had seen. I went there four times until I became suspicious that Brodman wasn't going to hire any one."

Champagne and 2 Detectives.

Thursday night Brodman telephoned Miss Hightower again and she notified police. Then she went to Brodman's room. He suggested that refreshments might be in order and sent for a bottle of champagne. A bell boy arrived a few minutes later with the bottle—and two detectives, Arthur Dixon and John Shine.

"I only wanted to get acquainted with nice girls," Brodman said yesterday. "I suppose I was doing wrong. I'm sorry."

He was held for further questioning. Brodman said he works for $35 a week for a loop investment concern. He said his father is a banker in Little Rock, Ark. Miss Hightower, who is 20 years old, lives at 5131 University avenue. Miss Scrol, who is 21, lives at 852 North Central Park avenue.

186 UNPAID TEACHERS LEAVE SCHOOLS; SAY CREDIT, FUNDS GONE

Shamokin, Pa., April 14.—(AP)—Declaring their funds and credit have been exhausted 186 school teachers in Northumberland and Schuylkill counties left classrooms today, vowing not to return until they are paid long overdue salaries.

More than 5,400 pupils in 22 schools looked forward to an indefinite holiday. The strike threat culminated months of efforts by the teachers to collect their salaries.

Officials and the teachers were agreed the school districts' financial difficulty resulted from inability to collect taxes. Anthracite companies are major taxpayers. The largest company, being reorganized under the bankruptcy laws, owes $339,000.

TWO ROOSEVELT ADDRESSES SET 3D TERM STAGE

Creates Idea He Will Be Ready if War Comes.

BY WALTER TROHAN.

Washington, D. C., April 14.—[Special.] — President Roosevelt today made two significant speeches which were interpreted as meaning that he would be a candidate for a third term should the world be engaged in or threatened with war in 1940. In the morning he delivered a speech in observance of Pan-American day before the governing board of the Pan-American union. He pledged the nation, after defining his foreign policy as one of internationalism, to match "force with force" in defense of any and all nations of the western hemisphere against aggression.

President Speaking at Mount Vernon.
[A. P. Wirephoto.]

In the afternoon at Mount Vernon he spoke in commemoration of the 150th anniversary of George Washington's notification of his election as the first President. Mr. Roosevelt dwelt at length on Washington's great sacrifice in putting aside the life he loved at Mount Vernon to take up the presidency in a critical hour.

Call Speeches Complementary.

Official Washington, from Capitol hill to embassy row, saw a studied connection between the two speeches. The President, according to the generally accepted interpretation, in his first speech again sounded war fears and in his second indirectly served notice that he is willing to set aside his hopes of happy years in his dream house at Hyde Park, N. Y., if a crisis arises.

In the Pan-American union address, Mr. Roosevelt drew a contrast between the coöperative and peaceful democracy of the new world and the hate and distrust in Europe. He pointed out that the coöperation of the Americas is not an accident because the same forces of diversity of race, language, and custom and passions of rivalry, power and expansion exists in the Americas but were overcome by the powerful ideal of a community of nations.

"The American peace which we celebrate today has no quality of weakness in it," he said. "We are prepared to maintain it and to defend it to the fullest extent of our strength, matching force with force if any attempt is made to subvert our institutions or impair the independence of any of our group."

Pledges Economic Defense, Too.

Mr. Roosevelt said that should the method of attack be economic pressure the United States will give economic support. He reiterated last summer's pledge to defend Canada against attack, which he made at Kingston, Ont.

Mr. Roosevelt disclosed himself as an internationalist in contradistinction to nationalists. He asserted that the economic functioning of the world is increasingly becoming a unit and no interruption anywhere can fail to disrupt economic life everywhere.

He predicted that within a few years the Americas will be as accessible to airplane attack as any nation of Europe now is. The oceans are narrowing so that the customs and actions of the Americas are necessarily involved with those of Europe.

Warns of Conquerors.

In the past, he said, the nations of the Americas were concerned with working together while in the future the western hemisphere will be largely concerned with getting the old and new worlds to work together.

"We have every right to say that there shall not be an organization of world affairs which permits us no choice but to turn our countries into barracks, unless we are vassals of some conquering empire," he said.

Although he inferentially attacked Italy and Germany and defended the European front being built by Britain and France against these two nations, Mr. Roosevelt ignored the rising tide of congressional protest against his gloomy talk of war and increasing internationalism.

President Roosevelt's Pan-American Address

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 14.—[Special.]—In his address before the governing board of the Pan-American union, President Roosevelt today pledged the United States to match force with force in defense of any and all nations of the western hemisphere against aggression.

The president said the Pan-American union, launched fifty years ago to promote the common civilization of the republics of the western hemisphere under a system of peace, today is "a great coöperative group facing a troubled world in serenity and calm."

Quotes from Speech in 1936.

Mr. Roosevelt then quoted from an address he made at a conference at Buenos Aires in 1936. At that time he said:

"'The madness of a great war in another part of the world would affect us and threaten our good in a hundred ways. And the economic collapse of any nation or nations must of necessity harm our own prosperity. Can we, the republics of the new world, help the old world to avert the catastrophe which impends? Yes, I am confident that we can.'

The remainder of his address follows:

"I still have that confidence. There is no fatality which forces the old world towards new catastrophe. Men are not prisoners of fate but only prisoners of their own minds. They have within themselves the power to become free at any moment.

"Only a few days ago the head of a great nation referred to his country as a 'prisoner' of the Mediterranean. A little later another chief of state, on learning that a neighbor country had agreed to defend the independence of another neighbor, characterized that agreement as a 'threat' and an 'encirclement.' Yet there is no such thing as encircling, or threatening, or imprisoning any peaceful nation by other peaceful nations. We have reason to know this in our own experience.

Buenos Aires Agreement.

"For instance, on the occasion of a visit to the neighboring dominion of Canada last summer, I stated that the United States would join in defending Canada were she ever attacked from overseas. Again at Lima, in December, the twenty-one American nations joined in a declaration that they woud coördinate their common efforts to defend the integrity of their instiitions from any attack direct or indirect.

"At Buenos Aires, in 1936, all of us agreed that in the event of any war or threat of war on this continent we would consult together to remove or obviate that threat. Yet in no case did any American nation regard any of these understandings as making any one of them a 'prisoner,' or as 'encircling' any American country, or as a threat of any sort or kind.

"Measures of this kind taken in this hemisphere are taken as guarantees, not of war but of peace, for the simple reason that no nation on this hemisphere has any will to aggression, or any desire to establish dominance or mastery. Equally, because we are interdependent, and because we know it, no American nation seeks to deny any neighbor access to the economic and other resources which it must have to live in prosperity.

"In these circumstances dreams of conquest appear to us as ridiculous as they are criminal. Pledges designed to prevent aggression, accompanied by the open doors of trade and intercourse, and bound together by common will to coöperate peacefully, make warfare between us as outworn and useless as the weapons of the stone age. We may proudly boast that we have begun to realize in Pan-American relations what civilization in intercourse between countries really means.

No Quality of Weakness.

"If that process can be successful here, is it too much to hope that a similar intellectual and spiritual process may succeed elsewhere? Do we really have to assume that nations can find not better methods of realizing their destinies than those which were used by the Huns and vandals fifteen hundred years ago?

"The American peace which we celebrate today has no quality of weakness in it. We are prepared to maintain it and to defend it to the fullest extent of our strength, matching force to force if any attempt is made to subvert our institutions, or to impair the independence of any one of our group.

"Should the method of attack be that of economic pressure, I pledge that my own country will also give economic support, so that no American nation need surrender any fraction of its sovereign freedom to maintain its economic welfare. This is the spirit and intent of the declaration of Lima: The solidarity of the continent.

"The American family of nations may also rightfully claim, now, to speak to the rest of the world. We have an interest, wider than that of the mere defense of our sea-ringed continent. We know now that the development of the next generation will so narrow the oceans separating us from the old world, that our customs and our actions are necessarily involved with hers.

"Beyond question, within a scant few years air fleets will cross the ocean as easily as today they cross the closed European seas. Economic functioning of the world becomes increasingly a unit; no interruption of it anywhere can fail, in the future, to disrupt economic life everywhere.

Plan to Work Together.

"The past generation in Pan-American matters was concerned with constructing the principles and the mechanisms through which this hemisphere would work together. But the next generation will be concerned with the methods by which the new world can live together with the old.

"The issue is really whether our civilization is to be dragged into the tragic vortex of unending militarism punctuated by periodic wars, or whether we shall be able to maintain the ideal of peace, individuality, and civilization as the fabric of our lives. We have the right to say that there shall not be an organization of world affairs which permits us no choice but to turn our countries into barracks unless we are to be vassals of some conquering empire.

"The truest defense of the peace of our hemisphere must always lie in the hope that our sister nations beyond the seas will break the bonds of the ideas which constrain them toward perpetual warfare. By example we can at least show them the possibility. We, too, have a stake in world affairs.

"Our will to peace can be as powerful as our will to mutual defense; it can command greater loyalty, devotion, and discipline than that enlisted elsewhere for temporary conquest of equally futile glory. It will have its voice in determining the order of world affairs.

"This is the living message which the new world can send to the old. It can be light opening on dark waters. It shows the path of peace."

LONDON, April 14.—President Roosevelt's address to the Pan-American union brought forth varied reactions in Europe tonight. In London and Paris great emphasis was given in the press of his rebuke to American nationalists. The German Nazis were reported to be furious. No comment was received from Italy.

The speech, heard by short wave, was picked up in Paris and rebroadcast over Europe in French, German, and Italian. It was also rebroadcast in German by a semi-official British station.

Though most diplomatic observers in London were inclined to the belief that Mr. Roosevelt was talking mainly for consumption in South America, British newspapers stressed the contention that he has abandoned America's policy of steering clear of European entanglements.

Linked with Chamberlain Talk.

Mr. Roosevelt's ridicule of Nazi fears of encirclement was interpreted in some quarters as an endorsement of the policy of guaranteeing the independence of smaller nations recently inaugurated by Great Britain and France. The Daily Telegraph in an editorial links Mr. Roosevelt's declaration with Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's outline of British policy in the house of commons last night.

The Telegraph emphasizes that, though the President spoke as an American to what he called the American family of nations, his words had a profound significance for the old world and were inspired by recent developments in the eastern hemisphere.

Mr. Roosevelt's claim to speak for the rest of the world is not likely to be disputed anywhere, the Telegraph states.

A Paradox of the Times.

"It is a paradox of the times," the paper declares, "that the most pacific nation of all should yet in effect be in a position to give the law to a continent armed to the teeth."

Referring to Mr. Roosevelt's belief that America can help the old world avert impending catastrophe, the editorial calls attention to the economic issues involved and adds:

"One part of the old world, at least, would ask nothing better than to see that belief vindicated."

The London Times also finds an identity of aims between the Chamberlain and Roosevelt policy.

The News-Chronicle applauds Mr. Roosevelt's rebuke to the totalitarian leaders and American Nationalists.

"If Hitler or Mussolini have been counting upon American indifference," the News-Chronicle says, "President Roosevelt's speech should make them think again.

ROOSEVELT TALK PHONED ABROAD ON FRENCH PLEA

New York, April 14.—(AP)—The National Broadcasting company announced today that at the request of the French foreign ministry its announcers had dictated over trans-Atlantic telephone to Paris for consecutive broadcast in French, German, and Italian President Roosevelt's Pan-American union address.

NBC officials said they could recall no similar request. French authorities, they said, had wanted the text immediately. It would have reached France in NBC's regular shortwave broadcast from 3:30 p. m. to 3:45 p. m.

BERLIN BLAMES ROOSEVELT FOR EUROPEAN CRISIS

Says President Is Behind British War Agitation.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, April 14.—While many units of the German fleet were preparing to steam toward the Mediterranean for spring maneuvers, Nazi Germany today was making a last effort to come to terms with England.

President Roosevelt is to serve as the alibi in the transaction. Nazi officials charged that Mr. Roosevelt is really responsible for what they termed the blackmailing war agitation in London. They declared England never would have thought of objecting to Germany's and Italy's invasions and conquests of Czecho-Slovakia and Albania if it had not been threatened with an "ultimatum by Roosevelt."

That is the interpretation the Nazi official news service, DNB, placed on statements published in America by what were called anti-German newspaper men who are close to the White House.

Press Assails Roosevelt.

In many of tomorrow's German newspapers Mr. Roosevelt will replace Great Britain as the target of German attacks.

"Encircler Roosevelt at Work" was the headline of the Lokalanzeiger, reporting on President Roosevelt's Pan-American day speech.

"Roosevelt is operating according to the old methods, 'Catch the thief,'" the paper said. "He speaks of peace and alleged dangers the same as Chamberlain [Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain of Great Britain]. And behind this so-called defensive policy one finds a systematic effort to encircle the totalitarian powers. Roosevelt speaks of protecting the South American states, but in reality he wants to spread American imperialism to South America."

The Lokalanzeiger and other papers featured the ultimatum Roosevelt was said to have sent to Chamberlain in March, but they added a question mark to their headlines about it.

Calls Roosevelt Meddler.

The official news service branded Mr. Roosevelt's speech as an impertinent demand for the right to meddle in European affairs, and talked of the promises of protection to other American states which were called worthless.

The Nazis explained that if England abandons its objections to the Nazi and Fascist expansions, the dictator powers may drop their anti-British campaign and come to some understanding. In the meantime, the Nazis continued their efforts to brand England as the tool of Moscow.

"England craves for the help of the red army," they said.

The Nazis derided the efforts of England in Gibraltar, Malta and Egypt to prepare for a possible conflict in the Mediterranean.

The German public learned today that a substantial part of Germany's navy will leave German ports Tuesday on a four weeks cruise in Spanish waters. The naval units, aggregating 50,000 tons, will call at Spanish ports on the Atlantic and Mediterranean, at Spanish Moroccoan ports, at Portuguese ports and at Tangier.

Deny Duce Called for Help.

The German squadron consists of two pocket battleships, the Graf Spee and the Deutschland, two light cruisers, six destroyers, three submarine flotillas of five U-boats each, and a number of escort ships and other smaller craft.

The admiralty denied that the German warships were proceeding to Spain in reply to a call for help from Premier Mussolini, who fears he will be outnumbered by the combined Anglo-French fleets.

On the contrary, it was stressed that the dispatch of a considerable part of the German navy to Spain, thereby exposing the German coast to a naval attack, proves that Hitler believes Europe is facing a long period of peace.

Called Old German Custom.

The admiralty added that by dispatching the German naval forces to Spanish waters for training purposes the German navy only resumes an old tradition interrupted by the Spanish civil war.

How far the German living space is to extend eastward has been kept carefully in the dark by Nazis in recent months. Occasionally a Nazi publication will divulge some of the Nazi ambitions. Today the N. S. Rheinfront, which is known as the mouthpiece of Joseph Buerckel, Hitler's commissar for Austria, described Rumania as the German street to the Black sea. The Nazis have started to claim the same privileges for the German minorities in Rumania as they claimed for the Germans in Czecho-Slovakia.

POLES THREATEN NAZIS WITH WAR IN DANZIG DISPUTE

Fear German Grab Is Set for Week-End.

BY DONALD DAY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RIGA, Latvia, April 14.—The approaching week-end will be an anxious one for the Polish government. Warsaw fears that Germany may annex the Free City of Danzig, which formerly belonged to Germany. Polish government officials said they discounted such reports. They said Germany knows that such action would result in immediate war with Poland. The Polish general staff has taken due precautions in Poland's western frontier districts.

Radio broadcasts from soviet Russia tonight accused Germany of plotting a putsch in Danzig this weekend. Articles in the Moscow press emphasized the importance of Danzig, for the future independence of Poland. There is no indication, however, of Russia being more than casually interested.

Ties with Paris Improve.

Gen. Wladyslaw Sikorski, former premier and war minister, who has consistently opposed the government's policy of friendship with Germany, returned to Warsaw today from a two months' visit to Paris where he did much to repair strained Polish-French relations.

It was largely due to Sikorski's efforts that Foreign Minister Josef Beck of Poland received an invitation to visit Paris to discuss strengthening the Polish-French alliance. It was reported that Sikorski soon will be invited to accept a cabinet post.

Sikorski, who is regarded as one of the best military strategists in Poland, said tonight that after spending two months in France, his opinion was that Europe was not in immediate danger of war.

Call Cannon Peace Promoters.

The fact that Poland has enough artillery trained upon Danzig to demolish the free city, he said, will help promote peace in central Europe, although the situation still is dangerous in the Mediterranean section.

Sikorski hoped that London and Paris would reply to German fleet maneuvers off the coast of Spain with maneuvers of their fleets in the Baltic.

The general was astonished at the political unity achieved in Poland as a result of the present crisis. He said that even the troublesome Ukrainian minority now was supporting the government.

Stanislaw Mackiewicz, editor and publisher of Wilno Slowo, independent Polish newspaper, was freed today by Prime Minister Gen. Felician Slawoj Skladkowski after promising to stop his writing until Sept. 24. Mackiewicz was arrested and sentenced without trial in March to the Polish concentration camp at Kartuz Bereza.

20 Moros Lose Lawsuit; Kill 4 of Victor's Family

MANILA, April 14.—(AP)—Reports today from Jolo Island said a score of Moros defeated in a land ownership civil suit by their former councilor, Moro Sangkula, attacked his family, killing four and wounding two. The killers escaped and were pursued by the constabulary. A Moro ran amuck several days ago at a Jolo pier and killed a postal employé and noncommissioned officer of the Philippine army. He wounded three others before killing himself.

RUMANIA THANKS LONDON AND PARIS FOR GUARANTEE

Hungarians Easing Balkan Tension.

BUCHAREST, April 14.—(AP)—Premier Armand Calinescu in a statement tonight said that Rumania accepts with grateful thanks the British and French guarantee of Rumanian independence.

Armand Calinescu.

"My government frequently has expressed its desire for an understanding with all neighbors and for development of economic relations with all states with which we are bound by mutual interests," Calinescu stated.

"At the same time, Rumania has declared its people ready to defend the nation's borders and independence," he said.

Adds to Nation's Confidence.

"The declarations of France and England, which came in such a spontaneous and friendly manner, have moved us deeply. Such declarations, from whatever quarter they may come, contribute to an atmosphere of confidence."

The newspaper censor of Bucharest, Col. Hotineanu, lost his job today because he permitted an editor to question the value of British and French guarantees of Rumanian independence. He was suspended by the prime minister's office for comment that appeared in the newspaper Curentul.

Balkan Tension Eased.

BUDAPEST, Hungary, April 14.—(AP)—Increasing optimism spread over the Balkans today as a result of a conciliatory gesture by Hungary toward Rumania. Count Stephen Osaky, foreign minister, suggested that Rumania and Hungary negotiate a pact extending the rights of the Hungarian minority in Rumania. Rumania has not replied. Hungarian soldiers still remain near the Rumanian border.

A CAPITAL JOKE OUSTS WIDOW FROM FRANCE

BIARRITZ, France, April 14.—(AP)—Senora Margot Topete, who appeared in a gown bearing the names of the leading anti-comintern capitals, was ordered today by police to leave French territory without delay.

Senora Topete, widow of a Venezuelan general, strode into a fashionable casino on Wednesday night in the gown. It bore the words Rome, Berlin, and Tokio in jeweled letters.

Patrons of the casino ripped off the ornaments. Police protected the woman.

STICK TO BRITAIN, SMUTS ADVISES SOUTH AFRICANS

CAPETOWN, Union of South Africa, April 14.—(AP)—Gen. Jan Smuts, minister of justice and former premier, urged today in a speech that the Union of South Africa stand together and stick by Britain. "We have a large country with many harbors and no defense," Gen. Smuts said. "We are lucky in having the British fleet to defend us. Our gold and other resources are the envy of other nations whose envious eyes are cast in our direction."

Report Submarine Sighted Off Coast of Nova Scotia

LOCKEPORT, N. S., April 14.—[Canadian Press.]—Officials tonight investigated a report of Capt. Vernon Goodick, skipper of a small Lockeport schooner, that he had seen an unidentified submarine come to the surface about ten miles off this south shore port.

FLORIDA SHIP CANAL GETS APPROVAL OF HOUSE COMMITTEE

Washington, D. C., April 14.—(AP)—The Florida ship canal, subject of many congressional debates, was approved by the house rivers and harbors committee today on a 10 to 6 vote.

Two Republicans and eight Democrats voted to revive the 200 million dollar project, abandoned in 1935 because congress refused to appropriate funds for it. Preliminary work had been done with $5,400,000 of relief funds.

HENRY COUNTY FARMER DIES.

Woodhull, Ill., April 14.—[Special.]—Gilbert Stephenson, 84 years old, native of Andover township and a farmer in Henry county most of his life, died last night in Galesburg. Funeral services will be held here Sunday.

MOSLEMS ASSAIL GERMANY, ITALY; MENACE CONSUL

CASABLANCA, French Morocco, April 14.—(AP)—Moslems demonstrated after their Friday prayers in the central mosque today, cheering for France and shouting: "Down with Germany and Italy." The demonstrators attempted to gather in front of the Italian consulate, but were dispersed by police. Speakers harangued the natives, criticizing the Italian occupation of Albania, which is a Moslem country. Similar demonstrations took place at Fez and Sale.

Mysterious College Fire Causes $100,000 Damage

Campbellsville, Ky., April 14.—(AP)—Fire of unknown origin destroyed the administration building of Campbellsville Junior college tonight. The damage was $100,000. All records in the executive offices, equipment of ten classrooms, and a $25,000 library were destroyed.

Urges Giving Windsor Job of Recruiting British Army

GLASGOW, Scotland, April 14.—(AP)—The recall of the duke of Windsor to England and his appointment as minister for national voluntary service was urged today by Henry M. Keith, provost of the industrial town of Johnstone, near here. Keith, whose position is similar to that of a mayor, said the former King Edward VIII. would have behind him a voluntary army of 2,000,000 in a fortnight.

FRENCH FEARFUL NEXT BLOW WILL BE AT TANGIER

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, April 14.—Fear that the next stroke by Germany or Italy may be at the international zone of Tangier, across the strait from Gibraltar, was tonight expressed in circles close to the foreign office. Uneasiness was felt over the Spanish situation too.

The menace to Tangier was found in formidable military preparations being made by Generalissimo Francisco Franco of Spain and Premier Benito Mussolini of Italy in Spanish Morocco, and in a violent Italian press campaign accusing France and England of planning to seize Tangier.

Another ominous sign is the decision of Franco to postpone his victory parade in Madrid from May 2 to May 15. This means a similar delay in the hypothetical evacuation of Italian troops from Spain. Troop movements were reported on the Spanish side of the Franco-Spanish frontier.

DICTATORS PLAN NEW MOVE, AID OF DUCE WARNS

Thousands Cheer Goering on Visit to Rome.

ROME, April 14.—(AP)—A new Italian-German move to gain what the axis powers call their just rights was foreshadowed today on the eve of conferences between Premier Mussolini and Reichsfuehrer Hitler's right hand man, Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering.

The Fascist editor, Virginio Gayda, announced in the newspaper Il Giornale D'Italia that the Rome-Berlin axis would counter French-British opposition by pushing forward what he termed the responsible plan of just rights and legitimate claims.

He said he made the disclosure because the attitude of Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain of Great Britain indicated that there was scant hope for comprehension, generosity, or justice. Gayda, who often reflects the viewpoint of Mussolini, had a conference with Il Duce before writing this.

Thousands Cheer Goering.

Goering, who arrived tonight after witnessing a demonstration of Italy's military preparations in Libya, will remain for two days. He and Mrs. Goering will be entertained at the Villa Madama, the government's new official guest house.

Mussolini himself welcomed Goering as he stepped from his special train, and a tremendous cheer roared from thousands massed outside the station, which was decked with German and Italian flags. Troops stood at attention and a band struck up the German national anthem and the Nazi Horst Wessel song.

The Italian cabinet today formally approved King Victor Emmanuel's acceptance of the crown of Albania. Provision was made for the appointment of a lieutenant general as viceroy in Tirana, the Albanian capital.

Ciano May Get Job.

It was suggested that Il Duce's son-in-law, Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano, might be named to the new post, with Dino Grandi, ambassador to London, returning to Rome to head the foreign ministry again. He was minister of foreign affairs from 1929 to 1932.

Gayda, who previously had characterized the Italian occupation of Albania as the Fascist response to French-British action, said today that British and French guarantees to Greece and Rumania would serve only to consolidate the forces of the Rome-Berlin axis which, he declared, once again have been victoriously defended and which will be maintained against all opposition.

There was no definite indication of the manner in which the axis would react.

ROME IS PLUNGED INTO DARKNESS IN MOCK AIR RAID

ROME, April 14.—(AP)—Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering of Germany was offered the spectacle of a mock air raid two hours after he arrived in Rome tonight.

At 10 p. m. sirens sounded and the city was thrown abruptly into darkness. Anti-aircraft cannon and machine guns surrounding the city opened a terrific fire. Rockets were shot into the air. Rocket illumination apparently is to be used by Italy in place of searchlights to make invading airplanes visible if war comes.

The heavy shooting apparently was carried on to accustom the civilian population to the noise of bombardment. Numerous airplanes flew over the city and drew anti-aircraft shells which burst near them. Sirens announced the end of the performance at 10:30.

Goering and Premier Mussolini were reported to have witnessed the drill from the roof of Il Duce's Palazzo Venezia.

Ethiopians Kill Italians in Raid on Rail Station

DJIBUTI, French Somaliland, April 14.—(AP)—Ethiopians attacked the Mojjo station of the Djibuti-Addis Ababa railorad, forty-five miles from Addis Ababa, according to reports reaching here today. They are said to have killed members of the Italian garrison and burned buildings including food and munitions depots.

LARISSA, Greece, April 14.—(AP)—Former Queen Geraldine of Albania, virtually recovered from the illness following her flight with her newborn son from Tirana, was removed from a hospital to a hotel today. Former King Zog rented 25 rooms for the exiled family and its large retinue. Full court etiquette was observed. The former queen's American born mother, Mme. Gladys Stewart Girault, now the wife of a French army major, arrived here Wednesday.

JAPANESE BOMB CHINA'S RAIL LINK INTO INDO-CHINA

Try to Cut Off Munitions; Destroy Station.

SHANGHAI, April 14.—(AP)—Japanese planes for the first time bombed the railway leading into French Indo-China, whence the Japanese insist important munitions shipments are going to the Chinese armies, Japanese naval officials said today.

Arrow locates point where Japanese bombed railway station.

The station at Mengtsz, seventy miles from the China-Indo-China border, was destroyed and bombs struck some rolling stock. The British ambassador, Sir Archibald Clark Kerr, was to have passed Mengtsz tomorrow en route to Chungking.

The Japanese charged that the railway, leading from Kunming to Haiphong, French port, was being used for munitions shipments with French aid despite Japanese protests.

Shoot Down Airliner.

Japanese warplanes yesterday shot down a Eurasia [German-Chinese] airliner near the French Indo-China border, injuring the German pilot. Passengers were unhurt. The party was making its way overland to Kunming, capital of Yunnan province.

The matter of supplies has become of increasing importance to the Chinese, and the effect of the South China rainy season of the next six months on the main highway for importing munitions may determine whether the war against Japan can continue.

Places Hope on a Road.

It is the Burma road, from Kunming southwestward into British Burma and Rangoon, upon which the government of Gen. Chiang Kai-shek places much of its hope—since its armies have been pushed steadily away from coastal provinces in the twenty-one months of conflict and forced inland toward Mongolia and Tibet.

[China also has a connection with soviet Russia through Mongolia, but it is over rough country and the extent to which it is used never has been fully ascertained.]

The Burma highway—it covers altogether some 2,000 miles from Chungking to Rangoon on the sea—is a dangerous, slender thread through the foothills of the Himalaya mountains.

FRENCH AND ITALIANS FIGHT OVER FASCIST REUNION IN FRANCE

NICE, France, April 14.—(AP)—Pro-Fascists living in France early today fought French patriots at Saint Laurent-du-Var, near this city, which has been an object of Fascist clamor.

The French objected to a Fascist reunion near a world war monument and went to the meeting hall after midnight. Some stoned the pro-Fascists, while others punctured tires of automobiles outside.

Three Italians were reported injured before police established order.

Germany to Negotiate Over Harbor for Lithuania

BERLIN, April 14.—(AP)—Negotiations between Germany and Lithuania over a free zone for Lithuania in the harbor of Memel will begin here April 24, it was announced officially today. Lithuania lost Memel, her principal seaport, when Germany took Memel land on March 22. At that time it was announced Lithuania would be granted harbor privileges.

JURY FINDS GIRL SLAYER IS SANE; JAILED FOR LIFE

Los Angeles, Cal., April 14.—(AP)—Ruth Ingrum, 23 years old, was sane when she killed her common law husband, Sheriff's Deputy Victor Paul, a Superior court jury found today. She was sentenced to life imprisonment in the women's institution at Tehachapi.

Miss Ingrum was convicted of first degree murder last night. Today the jury deliberated less than five minutes to determine her sanity.

An escaped convict from Oklahoma state prison, where she was serving a robbery term, Miss Ingrum shot and mortally wounded Paul last Jan. 13 in their home at Norwalk, Cal. She pleaded self-defense, saying she feared a beating at his hands.

EVANSTON HOME TO BE BUILT ON 30 FOOT PILINGS

Provision for the deepest home foundation in Evanston was made in a building permit issued yesterday by Building Commissioner Edwin M. Goodman to Fred D. Ellis, 2620 Simpson street, a structural engineer. Ellis' new home is to rest on eight inch pipes sunk thirty feet to the bottom of an old clay pit.

Thirty years ago Ellis' site was a deep clay pit. When he bought it ten years ago the pit had been filled with tin cans and rubbish. This filling did not provide a solid foundation. Ellis said that ever since the purchase he has been trying to find a way to use the property for a home site. He thinks the pipes, filled with concrete, will provide the answer. The site is on Bennett avenue, between Payne and Simpson streets, in Evanston.

MAN AND HIS WORLD (3)

By CALEB

MESOHIPPUS, the scientists call him—a species of small, three-toed horse, about the size of a collie dog—lived in North America some thirty million years ago. Likewise unimaginably far off in time lived one of our earliest ancestors—Neanderthal man—huddling his family in caves, and fighting and foraging for mere existence, while massive, rhinoceros-like monsters called titanotheres roamed the savage valleys and forests roundabout.

Thanks to research science, and the genius of the sculptor, Frederick A. Blaschke, all three of these prehistoric marvels—primitive beast and primitive man—can be seen in Field Museum hall of historical geology, as life-size reproductions. Marvels, in fact, greet the visitor everywhere throughout this cultural and educative center. For not only is anthropology, the story of Man through the centuries, revealed in all its strange magnificence, but the accompanying story of his world is retold in numerous halls dedicated to plant-life (botany), to the earth itself (geology), and to its animal kingdoms.

The Hall of Plant Life, for example, surveys the whole vegetative world from the microscopic to the gigantic. Two great sections alone deal with plant economics and the plant materials utilized in industry. Two others display complete collections of all the known woods.

Geology is similarly represented in two grand divisions: the scientific and the economic. Through exhibits and drawings one actually visualizes erosion, glaciation, folding, and other natural changes in the earth's crust. Here, too, is the largest and most elaborate known representation of the moon's surface, on a model nearly sixty feet in circumference. And among the enormous variety of gems, precious and semi-precious stones near by, one finds rarities like the diamond on which DeBrees, of Amsterdam, engraved the bust of William II of Holland . . . a five-year task.

Zoology's enthralling narrative is divided into three parts: classified series, special chronologic exhibits, and interrelative groupings. Birds, fishes, reptiles, amphibians, and skeletons of vertebrates—all are abundantly represented. Add to these features a general library and four departmental libraries containing nearly 100,000 scientific books and pamphlets—special extension facilities for Chicago schools—a guide-lecturer service—and a large publishing plant—and you glean some notion of the information and constructive entertainment afforded every visitor to this extraordinary institution.

ALLIES REPORTED SEEKING USE OF SOVIET AIR FORCE

Moscow Envoy Calls Upon Viscount Halifax.

LONDON, April 14.—(AP)—Great Britain and France were reported tonight to be seeking an agreement with soviet Russia under which the full force of the Red air fleet would be sent against any one attacking them or their allies.

It was said that this scheme had been discussed in a conference today between Viscount Halifax, British foreign secretary, and Ivan Maisky, Russian ambassador to the Court of St. James's.

The plan was reported to be a French idea, proposed in the hope that it would overcome differences which have arisen over Russia's cooperation with Britain's proposed European grand alliance against Germany and Italy.

Hope to Solve Objections.

Because of Polish and Rumanian objections to their territory being defended by a Russian land force, the French were reported to have suggested that the Russian air fleet alone be used against Germany if Germany were to attack either Poland or Rumania.

Rumania and Poland, under this scheme, would be asked to permit the Russians to use their airports.

Military experts were said to believe that Rumanian or Polish armies, backed by Russian planes, would be able to prolong a war on the eastern front while Britain and France were coördinating their attack on the west.

Rumania and Poland were represented as objecting to Russian support because part of the territory of each once belonged to Russia and they feared that if a Russian army again occupied the land, even as an ally, it never would give up the territory.

Lloyd George Sounds Warning.

Both Polish and Rumanian officials realized that neither Britain nor France was in a position to lend immediate support to their nations if Germany were to attack them, although Britain and France have promised such support.

"If war occurred tomorrow," David Lloyd George, world war prime minister of Britain, warned Prime Minister Chamberlain, "you could not send a single battalion to Poland."

Many experts agreed with Lloyd George and for that reason there were hopes that the support of at least the Russian air fleet could be gained. One British official tonight said:

"There is no reason to believe that Russia may not join the alliance within the next few days."

It was believed in other quarters, however, that Russia would resent the suggestion that its air fleet was wanted but not its army.

Seek Military Discussions.

Other developments of the day included:

1. British and French officials urged Poland, Greece, and Rumania to enter into strategic military discussions.

2. Joseph P. Kennedy, American ambassador, called upon Prime Minister Chamberlain and congratulated him upon his statement in the house of commons yesterday in which he extended guarantees of independence to Greece and Rumania.

3. The nation's preparedness campaign was expanded. The admiralty decided to form a women's naval service to take over many naval jobs on shore so that trained men may be released for new warships, and the ministry of agriculture planned to recruit a women's land army to replace or augment male farm workers.

Push Turkish Negotiations.

4. Foreign office officials said that negotiations were being pushed to conclude an Anglo-French guarantee to Turkey. It was believed generally such a pledge would be announced next week.

The prime minister and Mrs. Chamberlain left 10 Downing street in the morning for Chequers after Ambassador Kennedy called. They will go to Windsor castle tomorrow to spend a day and a night with King George VI. and Queen Elizabeth of Great Britain.

WIFE DEMANDS THAT POLICEMAN PAY BACK $4,000

Mrs. Katherine Sheehan, 2944 Logan boulevard, testified yesterday before Judge Rudolph Desort that she has given $4,000 to her husband, Policeman Jack Sheehan, since their marriage last Nov. 12. She asked return of the money pending settlement of Sheehan's divorce suit in which he charges cruelty.

Sheehan, who is assigned to the Lawndale station, denied owing that amount of money. He said that his wife, who is 41 years old, had been married twice before. Sheehan is 35. Judge Desort continued the hearing, urging the Sheehans to reach a financial agreement.

HOLDUP KILLER NAMED BY PAL ADMITS GUILT

Brookfield police announced last night that Robert Wilson of 5488 Hyde Park boulevard had confessed the seven year old murder of William J. Stinson, who was shot to death during a holdup in his drug store in the suburb on April 16, 1932.

Acting Chief Chester Crosby said Wilson confessed twenty-four hours after Otto Gehrke of 2758 Roosevelt road, a violin teacher, admitted complicity in the robbery and named Wilson as the actual killer. Gehrke was arrested Wednesday after Chief Crosby had received an anonymous tip that he was involved.

The two men were held in bonds of $20,000 each on murder charges by Justice of the Peace A. E. Summers of Riverside. This action was expected to void habeas corpus proceedings this morning in the Criminal court.

FRANCE STIRRED AS HITLER MOVES FLEET TO SPAIN

Experts See Trick to Cut British, French Lines.

to menace shipping between the United States and England.

Sea Raiders Are Fast.

It was pointed out that the German fleet will have two pocket battleships in its Spanish fleet, which gives the French and British a real cause to worry. France and England together have only five ships that could fight German battle cruisers on even terms—the Hood, Repulse and the Renown for England and the Strasbourg and Dunkerque for France. Seventeen battleships of the Anglo-French fleet are more strongly armed than the Deutschland, one of the pocket battleships, but they are not fast enough to catch her.

The cruiser Emden sank seventeen ships before she was sunk by the Australian cruiser Sydney, and so it is easy to imagine what a menace two Deutschlands, to say nothing of submarines and light cruisers, would be in the Atlantic.

No purely military or naval measure can now block or neutralize these strategic moves of the Berlin-Rome powers, it was authoritatively declared.

Experts List Consequences.

The map of the Atlantic showing the ship lanes between the Americas and Europe reveals the strategic consequences of Hitler's move. Naval experts list the principal ones thus:

FIRST—French troop transports from Africa via the Atlantic will be impossible unless convoyed by a powerful fleet. French communications with Africa via the Mediterranean will be imperiled by the Italians.

SECOND—British communications with the eastern Mediterranean and the orient via the Suez canal will be cut.

THIRD—Shipping from South America to England and France, including important shipments of beef and wheat from the Argentine, will cease unless the British devote a great part of their fleet to keeping the Germans bottled up in Spanish ports.

FOURTH—Shipping between the United States and northern Europe will be so acutely menaced from Spanish bases that it probably will have to make a long and costly detour around the Shetland Islands into the North sea—supposing, of course, that Hitler hasn't established a base in Norway by then.

Although a war before summer looks more likely today than ever before, some observers cannot help doubting that England intends to fight. That the German ships said to have reached Spain were not sunk on the way may lend weight to the view that Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain of Great Britain still believes in peace at any price.

There is another possibility. England and France may be relying on a simple though costly way of chasing the German fleet out of Spanish ports. The French army could invade Spain.

PROPOSES PRESIDENT BE FIELD COMMANDER IF U. S. ENTERS WAR

Washington, D. C., April 14.—[Special.] — The President of the United States would be required to serve as field commander of the nation's armies in a foreign war if congress approves a bill introduced today by Representative Osmers Jr. [R., N. J.]. The measure, which Representative Osmers termed the best peace plan ever proposed, calls for the first order of a selective draft to be as follows:

The Vice President, members of the cabinet, congressmen who voted for the declaration of war, corporation directors who sell munitions or secondary war materials for profit and on credit, and bankers who lend money to foreign nations to finance any war. These men could not become commissioned officers, and would be required to engage in actual combat, or to spend the duration of the war in bed.

The bill would be inoperative in case of an invasion of this country.

BILL TO ABOLISH WPA AGREED ON BY COMMITTEE

May Be Recommended to Senate Today.

BY CHESLY MANLY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 14.—[Special.]—The senate relief and unemployment committee headed by Senator James F. Byrnes [D., S. C.] will report favorably, either tomorrow or early next week, a bill to abolish the WPA and change the whole New Deal relief spending system.

The committee agreed on all except minor details of the Byrnes bill at today's session and it probably will be reported tomorrow. Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley [D., Ky.] has assured Senator Byrnes that his bill will be given the right of way and the plan is to put it through the senate next week.

Head of 1½ Billion Fund.

It is known that President Roosevelt has been hoping to keep the WPA unchanged through the 1940 election. But in the face of strong sentiment in congress against present relief conditions it is considered likely that the President may tolerate the Byrnes proposal rather than risk a revolt which might turn the administration of relief agencies over to the states.

President Roosevelt next week will request an appropriation of 1½ billion dollars for the WPA during the fiscal year beginning July 1 and the Byrnes bill, if passed, will head off any such appropriation.

With senate passage of the Byrnes bill virtually assured, the end of the WPA is in sight. In the house of representatives, where the WPA is under investigation by the appropriations committee, Representative Clifton A. Woodrum [D., Va.] is pushing a bill to abolish the organization. The Woodrum bill would create an unemployment relief administration, with an appropriation of 1 billion 120 million dollars for allocation and grants in aid to states.

Hope to Put End to Waste.

Both measures are intended to put an end to the waste, extravagance, and political abuses that have brought the WPA into public disrepute, as evidenced in the last elections.

The Byrnes proposal would compel the states to assume a much larger share of the cost of work relief projects.

Due to strong opposition, Senator Byrnes abandoned his proposal to create a new executive department, headed by a $15,000 a year cabinet officer to be called secretary of public works. His bill, as now agreed upon, would create an independent public works agency headed by an administrator who will be paid about $10,000 a year.

In this agency would be consolidated the present functions of the Public Works administration, the WPA, the Civilian Conservation corps, the National Youth administration, the procurement division of the treasury department, which has charge of federal buildings and the bureau of public roads of the department of agriculture.

Apportions Funds to States.

This agency would apportion its funds to the states according to a prescribed formula based upon two factors, total population and the ratio of unemployment to population. The states, or local sponsors of work projects would be required to put up 33 1-3 per cent of the total cost, or $1 for each $2 of federal money. Local contributions for WPA projects average about 17 per cent, while on PWA projects they are 55 per cent.

Senator Byrnes contends that a higher rate of local contributions for work projects than that now required by the WPA will diminish the clamor for federal easy money.

The Byrnes bill would forbid the allocation of funds to any project in which there were no state financial participation. This would put an end to the WPA's so-called white collar projects, such as the writers, theater, women's and professional workers' projects, unless the states or local sponsors put up one third of the cost.

Shares Cost of Relief.

While the bill thus proposes to continue work relief, with the states assuming a much larger share of the burden, it would rely upon unemployment insurance payments as a "first line of defense" against economic distress.

This would be the much less costly dole in disguise. The dole, however, would be borne not by the general taxpayers but by employers, through the social security pay roll taxes. Only six of the 48 states now tax employés as well as employers for unemployment insurance.

The Byrnes bill would liberalize the unemployment compensation provisions of existing law and require state compliance. At present the average length of time a person may receive unemployment compensation is 16 weeks. Under the Byrnes bill state laws would have to conform to a uniform standard requiring such compensation on the basis of one week's benefit for each four weeks of previous unemployment. The bill would require uniform weekly rates of compensation, graduated from $5 to $15 according to previous earnings.

The bill woud move up from 1942 to January, 1940, the date for beginning old age annuity payments to persons retiring at 65.

Circus Opens

Kenneth Waite of the Great European Olympic circus, a clown for 45 years, made up for opening performance.

Twelve thousand first nighters saw the opening of the Greater European Olympia circus at the Chicago Stadium last night. They watched Roxy of the elephant girls' baseball team knock a home run and cheered a modest daredevil who calls himself The Great Fussner for walking a 60 pound ball up a 104 foot spiral stairway.

Clown Kenneth Waite, who wears an enormous pair of shoes modeled after a chicken's feet, celebrated his birthday. Although the Human Projectile had nothing to celebrate, he let them shoot him out of a cannon because that's his job.

G. O. P. DECLARES FOR A COALITION JUDICIAL SLATE

Straight Ticket Proposal Beaten Easily.

Buy, Thomas P. Lynch, Denis J. Normoyle, and John Prystalski.

So thoroughly had the G. O. P. stage been set for coalition before last night's convention that the delegates—the fifty ward and thirty township committee men—refused even to hear the names of the straight Republican ticket which was ready for presentation. Even the appeals against coalition voiced by the county chairman, Edward F. Moore, went unheeded.

Moore Advises Straight Ticket.

"There is only one course to follow and that is to place a straight ticket in the field," Moore counseled. "There may be honest differences of opinion on that point, but it is the only thing we can do to end this talk of double dealing with the Democrats. I had no deals when I urged a straight ticket to this convention on April 6, and I have none now."

But before the straight Republican slate on which a committee had been laboring since April 6 could be read, Committeeman Dempsey proposed coalition "on a fair and equitable basis." He offered a resolution rescinding the convention's April 6 action in deciding to enter a full slate.

Moore ruled that consideration of the slate was the first order of business but Dempsey appealed from the decision of the chair and was supported by the convention.

Program Goes Through.

That roll call revealed the attitude of the delegates and it changed but little on subsequent questions. It seemed to spell a well-defined program which went through as scheduled.

A hot debate proceeded, however, before the convention actually voted for coalition. The most sizzling portion was contributed by Committeeman Charles J. Fleck [45th].

"You all know what 'honorable coalition' means," he said to the convention. "I'm wondering if Dempsey has already been slated for one of these judgeships. Rumors are rampant that he and Julius Miner and John Sbarbaro have been slated. If you're a Republican, be a Republican; if you have sold out to the city hall, get the hell out of here and go to the Democrats."

Wants to Be a Judge.

Dempsey then arose on a question of personal privilege.

"My Republicanism is not open to question," he declared. "My name has been mentioned for the judiciary and I'd like to be a judge, certainly. But I don't want to be made a judge by the Democrats. If the convention sees fit to nominate me, I'll accept it gladly."

"What do we gain by coalition?" demanded Committeeman James B. Waller [43d]. "Two vacancies are to be the Republican portion, I understand; one for one year and one for two years. For that you would besmirch the party just before going into the 1940 fight.

"There should be an independent ticket, if this goes through. I'll try and do it myself if anybody will help me."

"I'm not accusing anybody of making deals," Committeeman Charles E. Peace [42d] interjected, "but it would be easy to do it."

"I don't mind saying," came from Henry D. Lindblad [17th], "that we tried to find out what we could get from coalition. Dempsey was there and he knows we're not going to get a fair and square deal."

But despite this opposition, coalition was voted. The committeemen vote the Republican primary strength cast in the wards and the results showed: For coalition, 153,351; against, 80,198; not voting, 30,760.

The final action taken was the appointment of De Priest, Eugene Nusser [34th], and L. A. Wescott [Oak Park], to discuss the coalition with Democratic leaders and report back this morning.

G. O. P. TO NOMINATE 17TH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT CANDIDATES TODAY

Members of the central Republican committees of Lake, Boone, McHenry and Winnebago counties will meet in Rockford this afternoon to nominate three candidates for judges of the 17th judicial circuit.

The nominations of Judge Ralph J. Dady of Waukegan, representing Lake county, and of Thomas E. Gill of Rockford, representing Winnebago county, are assured. A fight for the third judicial place will be waged between Judge William L. Pierce of Belvidere, Boone county, and State's Attorney William M. Carroll of Woodstock, McHenry county.

It was said last night that Carroll will be certain of McHenry county's twenty-four caucus votes and Pierce of Boone county's eleven votes. The final selection is expected to be determined by the 108 combined votes of Lake and Winnebago counties. The delegates from these counties will vote uninstructed.

A story on April 12 stated that Max Murdock, chairman of a citizens' committee which examined the Chicago park system, had been appointed by Mayor Kelly. The Chicago park district chose and named the committee. It did not recommend passage of a $6,000,000 park bond issue pending in the legislature.

FOES OF SPECIAL BLOCK HIM AGAIN IN VOTE DISPUTE

Charles Special, president of the village board of Dixmoor, held a special board meeting last night. It turned out just like the meeting he called for Thursday night. Three trustees and Special appeared; three trustees who are fighting him politically stayed away, and there was no quorum.

The business that Special wanted finished was the selection of clerks and judges to officiate at the village election next Tuesday. The opposing faction, headed by Village Clerk Charles J. Wilson, already has submitted its list.

Special and Police Magistrate Charles A. Braun of Dixmoor have been convicted of operating a speed trap in the village and sentenced to a year in jail. An appeal is pending.

EXPECT U. S. TAX ACTION AGAINST M. L. ANNENBERG

Racing Publisher's Income Under Scrutiny.

The government is expected to move soon in an attempt to collect a large amount of back income taxes from Moses L. Annenberg, multi-millionaire publisher and the dominant figure in the United States in the dissemination of race track information. Annenberg is the principal owner of the Philadelphia Inquirer, the Daily Racing Form, and the General News Bureau.

Moses L. Annenberg. [Copyright: Bachrach.]

It was disclosed yesterday in Washington that agents of the bureau of internal revenue in Chicago have been busy for about four years inspecting the Annenberg books. A formal demand for payment, it was indicated, eventually will be made through the office of District Attorney William J. Campbell. Campbell said yesterday there had been no request by the attorney general for action. Treasury department officials declined to talk about the case.

Agents' Work Complicated.

Under the usual procedure the taxpayer is given an opportunity to make a settlement before his case is turned over to a federal grand jury for investigation.

The vast spread of the Annenberg interests—he holds stock in at least forty and possibly seventy-five corporations—is said to have complicated the work of the federal investigators. Apparently they have not completed their work.

Attorneys for the publisher said that some of his business ventures had progressed so rapidly that his own auditing force was inadequate to keep up with developments. Their explanation was that Annenberg was willing and anxious to pay every cent he owed, and that the difficulties were only technical.

Tells of Coöperation.

"He has coöperated in every way with the government," said one lawyer, who would not allow his name to be used. "He has given them free access to all his records. If they want more documents they can have them without subpenas or threats. If it's found he owes anything he will willingly make a settlement."

Annenberg, it was said, has set up a top holding corporation, the Cecelia Investment company, into which the profits of all the subsidiary companies are poured.

Families that move into Hinsdale from now on need never feel lonely. They will be welcomed by a municipal hostess, who will tell them Hinsdale is glad to have them, and then give them a glowing account of Hinsdale's opportunities.

The new hostess is Mrs. Louise T. Howe, who lives at 31 East Walnut street in the suburb. She is the retiring president of the Hinsdale Junior High School Parent-Teacher association, and is the mother of three daughters. TWO JURORS GET ONE DAY IN JAIL FOR FALSE OATH

Peter Bosian, 2652 Mango avenue, and George Kerstein, 2739 South Keeler avenue, members of a jury that returned a $35,000 personal injury verdict against the Yellow Cab company last October, each were sentenced to a day in the county jail for contempt of court by Judge E. I. Frankhauser yesterday. They were found guilty of swearing falsely when they were selected for the panel.

Bosian, Kerstein, and two other jurors, John Kostak, 5833 Navarre avenue, and Henry Ciechanowski, 5130 Belden avenue, had told cab company attorneys that neither they nor members of their family had been involved in automobile accidents. Investigation showed this untrue, according to cab company lawyers.

Bosian will serve his sentence today. Kerstein is at liberty on an appeal. The plaintif in the injury suit was Mrs. Ruth G. Thrasher of Woodstock. She was not involved in the jury irregularities.

Injured in Fall Off Truck, Youth Wins $17,500 Suit

A jury before Judge Grover C. Niemeyer in Superior court yesterday returned a $17,500 verdict for Jackson Moulder, 19 years old, in his personal injury suit against the Frederickson Express company, 7300 Central avenue, River Forest. Moulder, a senior at Fenwick High school, lives at 114 South Harvey avenue, Oak Park. He testified that he suffered severe leg injuries on Oct. 20, 1933, when he was thrown from a Frederickson truck which was transporting a group of football players to the high school gridiron at Division street and Harlem avenue.

As he lay on the pavement he was run over by a taxicab driven by Edward Bachner, 1227 South Central Park avenue. Blyskal was riding with his son-in-law, Frank R. Savage, 3942 Cermak road. The truck driver was Oscar Wienke of Kenosha, Wis.

11 OTHER STATES HONOR ILLINOIS' DRIVER LICENSES

Illinois drivers' licenses will be honored in eleven other midwest states—Indiana, Ohio, Michigan, Wisconsin, Missouri, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, North and South Dakota and Minnesota—the middle western division of the American Motor Vehicle Administrators' association decided yesterday. The association met in the Congress hotel.

Delegates to the meeting also discussed reciprocity between the states on automobile titles and registrations. John A. Nash, chief clerk of the Illinois secretary of state's office, was elected president of the association in this region for the coming year.

Evanston Police Chief, Ill a Year, Resumes Command

Police Chief William O. Freeman announced to his men yesterday that he was again resuming active command of the force after a year of part time duty because of illness. Carl Ekman, who has been the active head of the force, was returned to his post as chief of detectives. Freeman said the policemen in the future will change shifts at 7 a. m. and 3 and 11 p. m., instead of at 8 a. m., 4 p. m., and midnight.

WINNETKA LOSES FIGHT ON CHURCH SCHOOL PERMIT

The Illinois Supreme court yesterday upheld the ruling of Judge Joseph Burke directing the zoning board of appeals of Winnetka to issue a permit for construction of a parochial school in a residential section of the suburb. The proposed site is near Linden avenue and Hill road.

Village attorneys contended such a school was banned under the zoning laws and that its construction would tend to lower property values in the neighborhood. Weymouth Kirkland, counsel for the Catholic bishop of Chicago, asserted the zoning laws were unfair as they permitted public schools in residential sections but not parochial or private schools.

"We fail to perceive," the Supreme court ruling stated," to what degree a Catholic school of this type will be more detrimental or dangerous to the public health than a public school." The court held the zoning ordinance amounts to an invasion of property rights.

CONGRESS SPEAKS TO MR. ROOSEVELT.

A day after Mr. Roosevelt had been rebuked in the United States senate for his war scare and war talk and had been challenged in the house of representatives on his arbitrary powers, he made another provocative speech, promising the military and economic defense of this hemisphere, criticizing the European dictatorships and feeding the alarms of the people.

Representative Hatton Sumners, Texas Democrat, chairman of the judiciary committee, told his associates that the time had come for congress to take from the President all the great emergency powers it had granted and to resume its legislative authority. Mr. Roosevelt will not consent to that if he can avoid it and therein lies the danger of American intervention in Europe. It would be a way of prolonging autocracy here.

For the reassurance of the country and for the information of Europe it is important that congress make as forcibly as possible the statements which have come from Senator George of Georgia, Senator Reynolds of North Carolina, Senator Vandenberg of Michigan, Senator Borah of Idaho, and others.

France and Great Britain should be warned in their own interests that Mr. Roosevelt is not supported by the American congress in his war provoking announcements and activities. Mr. Bullitt in Paris and Mr. Kennedy in London are not authorized to commit the United States to any European adventures, and although they may make trouble they cannot make war against the wishes of congress.

Mr. Roosevelt, Mr. Hull, Mr. Ickes, and other officials of the government may denounce what they do not like in Europe, but if congress is determined to preserve the neutrality of the United States and to keep it out of war the provocateurs will be checked. We all know that the head of the American government, as commander in chief of its military forces, may create situations from which congress with difficulty can extract the nation, but he cannot take the final step. The bellicose nations of Europe should take into their calculations the fact that the American congress opposes the executive on the question of intervention.

Congress represents the people who would be obliged to fight this war and its members know how they feel about it. Mr. Roosevelt's attempts to build up a war sentiment and a war party have failed. He could not, we all may hope, carry congress with him into this enterprise unless he succeeded in provoking some shocking incident which would inflame the country. The people are now warned against this. Members of congress who have been informed of Mr. Roosevelt's ideas and ambitions have been greatly alarmed for some time. He has revealed to them a good deal of his war psychology and his program in world affairs. He has not been worried, but they have been.

The apprehensions started by Mr. Roosevelt's speech at the dedication of the Chicago bridge have never been quieted, but grow more acute as the troubles of Europe increase and as the attitude of our government is made clear in public utterances and private conversations. Mr. Roosevelt pretends that he considers it his duty to fight the battle for free peoples the world over. That is a deceptive war slogan which masks a conflict for imperial possessions. If there were no subject peoples in the world and no colonial possessions there would be less strife in prospect.

It is true that instinctively the American people prefer the conditions of life in France and Great Britain to the conditions in Italy, Germany, or Russia, but they are not called on to endure what Italians, Germans, and Russians must, and they will not be if they keep their senses. Such conditions will not be established here by Germany or Italy but might be if an autocratic American government could find an excuse for them in a war.

It is unsafe and unwise to assume that certain extreme and amazing policies are outside Mr. Roosevelt's ambition. He has become a self-centered, illusioned, and extraordinarily ambitious man. Several years of dominance over all branches of government have given him ideas of personal prerogative which are very dangerous when they possess a President of the United States in critical times. His faith in his destiny was never greater, and the horizons of his ambitions apparently include most of the world. His philosophy of government is revolutionary, his desire for monumental achievement is great, and his impatience of checks grows with opposition.

The statements which Halifax and Chamberlain made to parliament, and Daladier made to the chamber of deputies, indicate that Great Britain and France have every confidence they will receive American support. The French and British people are led to believe that the United States has underwritten the assurances given Poland, Greece, Rumania, and other nations, that they will be protected against aggression. The United States is spoken of as a member of the bloc which gives the guarantee. The situation thus created is very dangerous. It is therefore of the highest importance that congress make its position definite and specific.

"Whoever gives assurance," said Senator George, "whether they be in high or low places, to European nations that this country is ready to go to war, and will go to war, is simply misleading European nations because the congress of the United States and the American people have no idea of again engaging in a foreign war. They are highly resolved upon that course."

If the American people may rely upon that, and if Europe will understand it, a great deal of tragedy will be avoided. Great Britain and France within recent days have put the issue of war practically up to the temperament, to the choice, and the decision of Hitler and Mussolini. They have in fact issued an ultimatum out of which may come war or peace. They have drawn a line over which the dictators must not step. Nothing in the issue thus presented involves an interest of the American people.

The frontiers of Poland, the independence of Rumania, and status quo in the Mediterranean, the situation in Spain or in North Africa, do not contain any justification for American entrance into a war. If congress will not stand for it that war will not be fought by the American people. The resentment of the people is growing and the determination of congress is stiffening as the indications of Mr. Roosevelt's intentions increase in weight and gravity. If Europe will listen to what congress says it will be truly informed and will never have occasion to say that the United States betrayed the powers with which it was allied, because it is not allied with them nor associated with them in any way and cannot be until congress says the word. War provoking powers are in the hands of the President, but the war making power is not.

SENATOR SLATTERY.

James M. Slattery, chairman of the Illinois commerce commission, has been appointed by Gov. Horner to the seat in the United States senate left vacant by the death of Senator Lewis.

The new senator will hold office in a period in which decisions of utmost importance are to be taken. Europe is threatened with war and efforts are being made to force the United States to participate in it when it comes. America, overtaxed and burdened with a growing debt, is in the tenth year of depression and the nation's economy is again on the down grade after a brief period of recovery.

Seldom in the nation's history have senators borne as heavy a responsibility as they now face. In one sense, Mr. Slattery has no reason to be grateful for his appointment. Unfamiliar problems of great difficulty and complexity have been thrust upon him. He will be subjected to the heaviest kind of pressure to win his support. If he had consulted his own comfort he might well have declined the honor.

As senator, Mr. Slattery's influence may be exerted to keep this nation at peace. He may play an important rôle in restoring prosperity to industry and real employment to those who now are out of work. The people of Illinois, irrespective of party, wish him well. They hope that he will prove equal to the responsibilities which he now faces. They pray that his patriotism and his conscience will not be found wanting; that he will become a senator of whom Illinois will be proud.

THE WAGNER LABOR ACT.

Senator Wagner's defense of the labor act and its administration was full of the pride and prejudice of authorship. The senator could find very little wrong with either the provisions of the act or the manner in which they had been applied by the national labor board. The courts have found a great deal of injustice in what the labor board has been permitted to do or has assumed to do. The American Federation of Labor is one of the chief complainants, alleging that the act has been used to make the C. I. O. powerful and to injure the federation. Mr. Green of the federation has submitted a long list of specific instances in which the acts of the board were unfair to his organization.

The board, under what it assumed to be the authority of the act, has been the actual sponsor of many of the sitdown strikes which were really revolutionary seizures of property planned by communists. The board, finding its authority in the act, protected the communists to the extent of requiring that they be reinstated by the injured employer, and even that they be paid wages for the time they were occupying and destroying company property.

Such rulings were severely censured and reversed by the courts. Nevertheless it was labor board policy, and if there had been no higher authority to furnish a check the seizure of industries could have proceeded with the sanction of the federal administration. Under the act the labor board has proved itself either unwilling or incompetent to conduct fair elections in which the employés could peaceably determine what was to be their bargaining agency. Some of the murderous jurisdictional strikes and conflicts between rival labor organizations have been caused by the inability or unwillingness of the labor board to establish a procedure by which a fair election could be held.

In many instances employers have been subjected to strikes and disruption of production merely because the conflicting organizers were not compelled to submit the issue to a free vote without endeavoring by violence and deceit to win the decision.

Politically if not judicially it is well established that the labor board intended to pay the debt to John Lewis and as far as possible square accounts with him for the $600,000 he took from his union members, chiefly the miners, and gave to the New Deal campaign fund. Mr. Lewis claimed repayment, and although he never professed himself to be satisfied the labor board endeavored to liquidate the debt to the great injury of many American workmen and their employers.

The Wagner act as administered has not been what it purported to be—a measure for industrial justice and peaceable settlement of labor disputes.

WAR READY KEPT DATE.

[Topeka Daily Capital.]

One night in February, 1918, four members of the allied armies were enjoying a furlough in London. Two were Americans, Sam Kemp and Conrad Pope. The others were George Lewis, Englishman, and Edouard Lablet, a French lieutenant in the air force. The four agreed that on the same date and midnight hour, twenty-one years later, they would meet again in the same spot at the statue of Eros in Piccadilly circus, London. Word has come from London that only one of the four, Conrad Pope, now a New York City engineer, kept this rendezvous. The other three had passed on and Pope knew they would not be there, so he said a prayer for his three missing friends and returned to his hotel. "I am not sentimental," he told a newspaperman, "but if I had failed my war buddies on that date a promise never would have meant anything to me again."

MAN WITH AN IRON HAND.

The reported discovery of vestiges of two of La Salle's old forts in the southwest forest preserve region caused us to re-read passages in Parkman's "La Salle and the Discovery of the Great West." And as we skimmed this great story of amazing explorations in a savage wilderness—a tale over which the ancient forest broods with silence and mystery—we began to wonder about La Salle's heroic lieutenant, Henri de Tonty, who spent more years on the Chicago portage than the leader himself. Why is there no memorial to his loyalty and intrepidity somewhere in this city? Why no street named after him?

* * *

So we reached for the map and the street guide, and behold, we found Tonty avenue in the extreme northwest corner of the municipality, running along the boundary of Billy Caldwell's reserve, with Victorin Pothier's reserve as its neighbor. [We haven't the foggiest notion who these characters were, but they sound like half-breeds of the Fort Dearborn period.] That's forest preserve country, and the Bunker Hill golf course is hard by. The street begins at Caldwell avenue and runs northeast about 2,500 feet to a stub-end at the C., M. & St. P. tracks.

Well, it's nice out there, with none of the horrors of civilization to oppress Tonty's free, open air spirit. But he deserves additional and more conspicuous recognition.

* * *

"Tonty of the Iron Hand," he was called, either because he had lost a hand which was replaced by some metal device, or because he wore a steel gauntlet for the purpose of bashing refractory Indians. One swipe from Tonty and a disorderly brave would go to sleep for several hours, usually minus his front teeth. On this account the Indians regarded him as a medicine man of the first degree.

WAITING AT FLOODTIME.

Frail straw on yellow straw to stop disaster—
This trying to hold back, with word on word,
The rising flood that whirls on fast and faster.
O, listen! while the words can yet be heard.
Who gained, of all our last macabre dancers?
Not bladed ones nor those who found swift peace.
And who escaped unscathed? Not one voice answers.
What recompense can we now offer these?

And when the older world is smoking ruins,
Who will there be but us to ease the curse?
For those who war will lose, no matter who wins,
What can we do that will not make it worse?

We serve who stay to guard a well armed State—
With Freedom's flag above—and sanely wait.

The Duke Goes After Shanty Al.

Lissen Shanty Al, ain it enuff I got your cousin Snow-Shoe Al on my neck for no reason and on my cuff for a $6 reason? So now, why shood a no-good white trash brainless yap like you bust out [4-1-'39] and claim I'm going steady with a black widow poison spider? On inquiring as to how she got full of poison she tells me she was over in shanty town lately and had bit one of your relatives.

By the way, I had 2 letters from your family today, one from the in-laws and one from the outlaws. The home town is shy one native. Your Uncle Putrid is hoose-gowing again; the whole town is giving him the horse-laff. Seems he sold a gallon of mule to a revenooer an then the darn fool tried to slip him 3 lead dollars in change. Aunty Rancid had a sow that won a blue ribbon at the county fair an the judge being near-sighted pinned the ribbon on Aunty instead of on the sow. Your cousin Gangrene says it proved the judge was far-sighted. Your cousin Musty is going to marry Bud Moldy's oldest gal. Bud told him he better had [or else].

That goofy brother of yours thought he was gonna spend a few months with your clan but the guards located him an now he's Napoleon again. When they grabbed him he picks up an umbrella and tries to tell them that they got the wrong guy an when they asked him if he wasn't Napoleon he says "Absolutely not. Can't you see I'm Chamberlain?" If you happen to run into Snow-Shoe tell him that you and him have something in common. Duke Bakrak.

P. S. Yeah! He's also a gutter-snipe.

In Chicago's Faubourg St. Germain.

I have been wondering why Astor street has not appeared in your parade of streets. I am sure it is unsurpassed for atmosphere, and the quiet, dignity, and architectural beauty of its half dozen blocks are beloved by us near north siders who like to stroll there on Sunday afternoons, or in the early evening before the curtains are drawn, when one may glimpse the mellow beauty of walnut paneled walls, and tall candles being lighted on dinner tables.

It was named for John Jacob Astor, who [I think in the 70s] bought a tract of land along the lake from Division to North avenue and ran this street through it. Some of the houses in its two upper blocks were designed by Stanford White. Bobby Carley.

TUBERCULOSIS: GROUP DETECTION WORK.

WHILE the death rate from pulmonary tuberculosis has decreased remarkably in the last three decades and now stands at one-third its former level, it is far from satisfactory and we must not be complacent or self-satisfied until the affliction has been conquered completely. The white plague is still a menace to health, particularly during that period of life in which the individual exhibits his greatest activity. The incidence among young adults is a vital challenge to our "outwitting" ability.

Long ago it was established that tuberculosis is curable if recognized and treated soon enough. So many measures have been devised for detecting it that there would seem to be no excuse for the existence of hidden infections. Methods of diagnosis are standardized throughout the world and any properly trained physician can use them.

In recent years intensive investigations have been made upon medical students, pupil nurses, and grammar and high school children for the purpose of ferreting out smoldering embers of the malady. Such programs are called "case finding studies." With each member of the group, the presence or absence of the bacillus within the body is checked.

This entirely harmless procedure is called the tuberculin test and the one most frequently employed is that perfected by Charles Mantoux in 1908. A minute amount of extract made from dead tubercle germs is introduced into the skin. Within twenty-four hours—if the response is "positive"—a red, raised lump will appear at the site of the injection; if "negative"—there will be no local disturbance. The former indicates that the individual has been exposed to some one who is giving off the bacilli or that he himself is harboring them.

It should be understood that a "positive" is merely a straw showing the direction of the wind and is not by any means a final verdict. There was a time when it was believed that this was proof that the reactor would not show subsequently acute manifestations of the disorder. Accurate observation, however, demonstrates that these young persons are much more likely to exhibit the disease in the future than are those who have never been associated with the organism. Furthermore, trouble will usually start before they reach young manhood or womanhood.

The mere fact that there is a positive Mantoux, however, will not tell whether the disease is active at the present time and further search is necessary. All suspects should have X-rays of the lungs. While the plates may not reveal tiny areas of early disease, yet if a number are taken at intervals of two or three months, the percentage of correct diagnoses will be considerably enhanced. If the X-ray films suggest an open infection, sputum analyses and temperature charts should be kept for further confirmation.

Segregation of the one who shows beginning signs of the ailment—together with rest—not only protects him against the development of a serious lesion but insures the safety of those who might come into contact with him.

We may say that no tubercle microbes have ever entered the bodies of those who return negative findings and if guarded from all contact they need have no further concern. Nevertheless, medical students, nurses, or hospital attendants—because of their frequent exposure to tuberculous patients—should have yearly examinations.

This plan for uncovering latent cases is without question one of the most important steps in the further reduction of mortality from this dread disease. It is to be hoped that it can be extended to an ever increasing proportion of the population. Our first effort, however, should be directed toward the adolescent. Our ultimate goal—which will be years in attainment—is the wiping out of the scourge. In the meantime, identification of the incipient victim means 100 per cent cure.

HAVE A CHECK-UP.

L. D. writes: For some time, when I wake up in the morning, I have a heavy and uncomfortable feeling beneath the ribs, mostly in the back. After getting around for a while I feel better. Can you suggest a method of procedure?

REPLY.

A careful examination is in order, including a study of the diaphragm, the lower chest, the upper abdomen, and the stomach and gall bladder regions. The kidneys may need checking, also. While your whole trouble may be dietary, it isn't safe to assume that this is the origin unless organic possibilities have been ruled out.

LITTLE DIFFERENCE.

F. W. B. writes: What is the relative value of an emulsion of cod liver oil and the plain variety?

REPLY.

We use cod liver oil for vitamin D and for nourishment. In an emulsion the particles are finely divided—hence more easily digested. But this job is performed by the alimentary tract fairly well anyway, so it really makes very little difference.

ROSEOLA.

H. T. writes: What causes the rash termed roseola?

REPLY.

This means a symmetrical eruption in small groups of reddish or scarlet patches. It may be caused by several diseases—such as German measles, measles, typhoid, etc.

CHANGE OF BENEFICIARY.

Chicago, April 7.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Kindly advise if a married man with two married sons and separated from his wife can [1] take out or [2] change an insurance policy without making a will, naming a person who is no relative to him beneficiary?

3. This man is a resident of Canada and the person to whom he intends to favor lives in Chicago. M. H.

1. There is a general rule requiring what is called "an insurable interest." We cannot advise without having your facts more clearly before us.

2. Right to change an existing policy would depend on the wording of that policy. The insurable interest requirement, if satisfied when the policy was taken out, would not invalidate the assignment.

We suggest that you submit all of the facts to the home office of the insurance company. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

DRIVERS' LICENSES.

Lombard, Ill., April 11.—The undersigned filled out his application and hied himself to the Ashland avenue branch of the secretary of state department on Jan. 4 where application with fee was accepted with that of three others of the family together with the necessary fee, for drivers' licenses. About four weeks later the three other license cards were received.

On Feb. 6 a letter was written to Mr. Hughes' department. On March 7 a letter was received from the license department at Springfield, same being dated Feb. 20 and postmarked March 6, calling attention to the great rush of applications for motor vehicle plates and requesting that a wait of three weeks be made before writing further.

On March 25 another letter was written calling attention to the first one and the one received from the department. To this date no reply has been received.

It would seem that the secretary of state, in his organization of the department, must be lax. A definite reply cannot be made within ninety days where all the information was given that it is possible to give, owing to the fact that in accepting applications at the Ashland avenue branch no receipts are given.

Though the amount of fee is small if there is a general practice of losing all trace of applications filed, as it seems was done in this case, it would result in quite an amount of misplaced funds.

NEW YORK GETS RID OF AN "L."

Chicago, April 11.—On my desk as I write are New York newspapers giving pictorial prominence to the wrecking of the outmoded 6th avenue "L" at the unsightly 42d street station.

Again we see an instance of the growing belief that becomes more and more accepted every day: "While Chicago talks, New York acts." We are faced with the same needless, antique structures in Chicago. We have succeeded in partially working out plans for a subway system but our elevated system still flies the flag of the buggy whip. How long will Chicago merely sit by and watch New York accomplish the things we want to do? KARL EITEL,

Chairman, Traffic and Safety Committee, Greater Chicago Hotel Association.

BOYCOTTS.

Chicago, April 12.—Father Coughlin innocently asked: "Why are the Jewish people boycotting Nazi Germany and not communistic Russia?"

In reply, I wish to enlighten Father Coughlin that the Jews are not boycotting Germany because of dislike for its form of government but because of the persecution of their people, whereas in Russia there is no discrimination between race, color or creed. Nevertheless, I have yet to learn what the Jews are buying from Russia, if anything at all!

WAR GUILT.

Chicago, April 11.—Pre-war tactics of the kaiser for world power led to the world war, and those of Hitler are similarly leading to another conflict. For twenty years German propaganda did its utmost to erase her war guilt. Will Germany and Italy, after starting and losing the next war, try to avoid responsibility by blaming the democracies?

LEON T. WALKOWICZ,
President, Polish-American Historical Society.

PREJUDICE.

Chicago, April 11.—I was called for an interview for a position this morning and turned over to a personnel manager. My name being perhaps a bit unusual, upon hearing it this man asked me what my nationality was. American, I replied. I was born in Chicago, my parents were born in Iowa, and their people were more or less pioneers. Yes, but what kind of a name is it, he wanted to know. On my father's side, I said, my name comes down from German ancestors. "O, he said, "what do you think of Mr. Hitler? You have heard of Mr. Hitler, I presume? No doubt you have seen his name in the papers. Did you ever serve in the army? What do you think of the way things are going?"

I was so bewildered I couldn't think of any immediate reply adequate, but sensing my confusion, he said, "O, I was only kidding, heh heh."

How do men like this ever get themselves into an at least semi-executive position? My grandfather fought in the civil war and one of my grandfather's brothers was treasurer of a state eight years and a general in the United States army.

Are we entering into the "Hun" hysteria of 1916? ONE OF TEN MILLION.

HERE'S TO TONY.

Chicago, April 12.—It is just what one might expect that a fellow who would write an article such as the one under the heading of "He Doesn't Like Brats," would sign his name "Reader."

We have around our home at 531 Michigan avenue, Evanston, a fine example of such an accomplishment. The janitor of one of our neighboring apartments has a decided dislike for children. Quite naturally then the children cannot find it in their hearts to have much love for him. As a consequence they are not as considerate of his grass and flowers as they might be.

Contrasting this, the janitor of our building loves the children. They all call him Tony. When Tony sows his grass and plants his flowers in the spring he gives each child of the near neighborhood a plot for his own. Those children watch the growing of that garden with more joyful anticipations than any one else, including Tony. Just let some unthinking youngster set foot in that garden and he is set upon by the rest of them and given definite instructions to the effect that it must never happen again. REX ELTON FAIR.

OUT ON A LIMB.

Rockford, Ill., April 10.—Administration spokesmen assuring business the emphasis would now be on recovery rather than on reforms, and then left out on the limb by the President, now appear to be in about as embarrassing a position as the schoolboy representing Abstemiousness in living statues, who was seized with a violent attack of hiccups. C. L. CLARK.

ANOTHER SALARY LIST.

Chicago, April 11.—Now that you have printed a list of corporation salaries, the citizens of Chicago, especially the property owners, would be interested in seeing a list of city employés and their salaries. It is our tax money that pays them and moreover we have a right to see where our money goes, haven't we? R. L. F.

THE GREAT CIRCLE PROBLEM.

Alameda, Cal., April 8.—Chicago is the accredited center of the map publishing industry of our country, and I learn on excellent authority that about one-quarter of all maps sold purport to represent the surface of our globe because they are called world maps and sold as such. Yet, strange as it seems, all these so-called world maps are not only as outmoded as an ox cart with solid wooden wheels but utterly inadequate to serve the needs of modern giography, especially since the advent of imperialism, aviation, and radio.

This week the Yankee Clipper arrived in Lisbon en route to England. But supposing she had flown straight there from the Pan-American hangars on Treasure Island in San Francisco bay, which, be it noted, is about the same latitude as Lisbon. Would she fly north or south of Chicago? All existing world maps show scuth as the correct answer and all existing maps are wrong. So much for the Atlantic. Now let us take a problem of the Pacific. Suppose a bombing squadron flew from Tokio to destroy the Panama canal. Would it go over the Hawaiian Islands? All the world maps say yes. The answer, however, is most emphatically no.

Both questions can be answered easily with a piece of string stretched tightly over the curved surface of a globe and connecting San Francisco with Lisbon, or Tokio with Panama, thus showing the direct and shortest route between these places, arcs of a great circle. The United States Coast and Geodetic Survey at Washington declares explicitly in its treatise on map projection, "when map and globe do not agree, the former is at fault." B. J. S. CAHILL.

FOR SOCIAL WORKERS.

Champaign, Ill., April 13.—I consider Mr. Orr's cartoon on the front page of today's TRIBUNE the most unjustified and contemptible attack on professional social workers I have ever seen. As the business executive of a local community chest, with no training as a social worker, I represent the subscribers rather than the agencies and their professional staffs and believe I am qualified to protest without prejudice and from experience. As a rule the professional social worker is sincere, self-sacrificing, capable and objective in dealing with individual problems to the end that there may be a job, health, education and character development for every one and at the same time a reduction in tax supported institutional costs. H. A. AMERMAN,
Executive Secretary, Champaign-Urbana Community Chest.

DR. HOPKINS' CLINICS.

Chicago, April 10.—Considering the major operations which New Deal quacks have performed on private enterprise in this nation, and the present sinking condition of the patient, the most comic prescription of all is the latest one, Dr. Hopkins' "plan for setting up business research stations in each of the forty-eight states." Why, Harry, the case has been diagnosed from the housetops a million times by thousands of competent voices. The remedy is so simple that it is laughable. But as it is not one of the formulas of the New Deal we know it will never be used until there is a new broom in Washington—say around 1940. READER.

GRAND JURY ASKS INTENSIVE PROBE IN LABOR TERROR

Union Organizer Denies Part in Violence.

The Cook county grand jury was reported yesterday to have begun an investigation into the labor murder and violence of last Wednesday in connection with the dispute between the trucking unions and the Wieboldt department stores. The jury heard one witness and was reported to have ordered an intensive inquiry into the labor terrorism.

The witness was Fred Thomas Smith, 40 years old, 3051 5th avenue, who was arrested on Thursday outside the office of the Commission Drivers' union, Local 703, at 220 South Ashland avenue. This is one of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters' unions that has called a strike at the Wieboldt stores.

Car Linked to Slugging.

Smith was arrested when he stepped into an automobile that had been parked for several hours in front of the union headquarters. The car was identified by witnesses as the one used by four men who stopped a Wieboldt company truck on Wednesday afternoon and beat the driver, John Borowski, 22 years old, into unconsciousness.

When arrested Smith said he was a clerk for the truckers' union, but yesterday he said he was an organizer for the Electrical Workers' union, local 134.

Questioned by Assistant State's Attorney Gordon Nash, Smith is said to have told the grand jury that he knew nothing about the beating.

Durkin Works for Settlement.

Martin P. Durkin, state director of labor, worked during the day to bring about a settlement of the dispute. He assigned two conciliators, William Murray and Patrick Cullen, to confer with union leaders in the morning. During the afternoon the conciliators visited Elmer F. Wieboldt, president of the stores.

The two conciliators, after hearing both sides, proposed the basis of a settlement. The terms were taken under advisement by Wieboldt.

Sherif O'Brien yesterday was asked to assign deputies as guards for Wieboldt trucks traveling to and from company suburban stores. Representatives of the stores pointed out that none of the men hired by the store as guards has been armed, and said they feared violence in the suburbs. The sherif refused to assign deputies to the trucks, but indicated he would provide some protection.

Continue Guard in City.

Capt. John Prendergast, chief of uniformed police, said squads and patrolmen are continuing to guard Wieboldt stores and trucks. The murder on Wednesday of James Lawrence, a truck helper, might have been avoided, Capt. Prendergast said, if the truck driver had stayed on Ashland avenue, which was being patroled by squad cars.

"When the driver of the truck left the Wieboldt store at Division and Ashland, he turned west to Marshfield avenue immediately and then came south," Capt. Prendergast said. "He never was near Ashland. The shooting came when he was at Marshfield avenue and Walton street."

At the inquest the driver testified he had not been informed that Ashland avenue was being patroled. He said he was told to use his own discretion.

Mayor Kelly yesterday directed Ald. William A. Rowan [10th], chairman of the newly created council committee on labor and industrial relations, to take steps toward settling the strike. The committee will meet tomorrow and will ask representatives of both sides to attend a conference in the city hall on Monday.

ALL DAY PARLEY FAILS TO SETTLE TRUCKERS' STRIKE

Representatives of Chicago building material merchants and labor officials conferred all day yesterday in an effort to settle a strike of truck drivers which is holding up deliveries of materials to public and private construction projects.

More than 1,500 truck drivers and helpers were called out Thursday by the Building Material Chauffeurs' union, an American Federation of Labor affiliate, in a demand for hourly wage increases. The dealer-union conference was conducted behind locked doors in the offices of the Building Material Merchants of the Chicago district, 228 North La Salle street.

Ralph H. Burke, city subway engineer, said excavation in the subway tunnel at State street and Chicago avenue had ceased because materials could not be obtained. Other subway projects had not progressed to the point where they were affected, he said.

STRIKERS PICKET AIR LINE BASES; HOPS CONTINUE

Eastern Air Lines announced service was being maintained yesterday throughout its New York to Houston and Chicago to Miami routes despite a walkout of a number of the line's mechanics, in an attempt to get wage increases, at midnight Thursday.

There were no demonstrations here, but at the Newark, N. J., airport and at Miami, Fla., where the company's main repair and overhaul bases are located, picket lines were established.

Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, president of Eastern, announced that only 52 of 250 maintenance employés had walked out.

Robert H. Stoy, editor of the monthly publication of the striking union, the Air Line Mechanics' association, said here all eight Chicago mechanics were out. He said thirty-four were on strike at Newark and twelve at Atlanta, Ga.

The A. L. M. A., an unaffiliated union, was established three years ago.

Also shown are the locations of the headquarters of the two unions involved in the investigation, the Electrical Workers' union, Local No. 134 (1), and the Commission Drivers' union, Local No. 703 (2), and the four Chicago stores of the Wieboldt chain of six.

COUNCIL BACKS MAYOR SMITH IN KANSAS CITY

Kansas City, Mo., April 14. — (AP) — Mayor Bryce Byram Smith, who built a fortune in bread before he turned to politics, emerged tonight as the boss in the Kansas City administration's effort to recover from staggering federal-state blows on the city's vice and crime.

Smith won the solid backing of the council in his announced determination to take control of the city's affairs and accept the resignation of Henry F. McElroy, city manager under Boss Tom Pendergast since 1926.

"Are you for me or against me?" Smith flung in the faces of his fellow Democratic councilmen as he demanded a showdown on his acceptance of McElroy's resignation yesterday. One by one the members of the council pledged their support.

The councilmen asked Smith to take over the city manager's duties without title. He is not eligible for the position under the charter.

YANKEE CLIPPER HOPS TO AZORES FROM LISBON

BOOKS

New Steinbeck Novel Employs an Epic Theme

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"The Grapes of Wrath," by John Steinbeck. [Viking, $2.75.] Published yesterday.

John Steinbeck has written the epic of the new covered wagon days in this stupendous novel, with well mapped U. S. highway 66 to California almost as unknown a territory to the new pioneers as the old wagon-rutted paths of the uncharted days of the western trek. Instead of wagons in this modern trek there are ancient jalopies, bought from junk piles and converted into trucks on which are heaped meagre household goods and whole families.

Mr. Steinbeck writes of the new trek toward a promised land, of dreams of plenty in a land where nature is lavish and work is ready for any willing hand. The tragedy of that trek is Mr. Steinbeck's inspiration to a novel for which all the books he has written in the past might almost have been essays.

The journey of the members of one family, once owners of their own forty acres in Oklahoma until the dust storms sifted poverty over them, is the framework of the unforgettable panorama. Their eagerness, their despair, their generous kindness to their fellow travelers, their stoic acceptance of destitution, their hearts hardened even against death, but their belief in their land of promise ever green, make poignant a new phase of American life. Never before in our day has an American author written more unforgettably.

Wells Prophesies Again

"The Holy Terror," by H. G. Wells. [Simon & Schuster, $2.75.] Published Monday.

H. G. Wells has taken another look into the future in this long novel. If it doesn't seem as full of plummy ideas as little Jack Horner's pie, that is only because it is about a dictator and most readers' minds have developed callous spots about that subject from daily reports of actual "holy terrors."

Mr. Wells' hero—by the author's express statement—is not a portrait of any one existing dictator, nor even a composite of them all. He is rather Mr. Wells' idea of a dictator who profits by the mistakes of his predecessors, who is an expert picker of other men's minds, and who has mixed a certain honest wish for the betterment of the world [taken from the minds of some of his advisers] with the flubdubbery of bullying.

The second world war is fought in these pages—in the 1950's—not in as much detail as many readers would wish, for Mr. Wells has proved himself in the past at his best in descriptions of future conflicts. There emerges from the second world war a new world state. And it is all done on a resounding slogan: "Common Sense for the Common Man."

Dictating seems to be an autointoxication, and Mr. Wells' holy terror, who is the least pleasant of human beings from the hour of his birth, becomes so poisoned by his own venom that the reader feels the ending is perhaps less ironic than Mr. Wells intended it to be.

"The Holy Terror" is a novel of ideas and of action, rather than a novel of character and emotion. Its "message" is that the world can and will, by its own force, survive. "The Holy Terror" is an emulsion of the early Wells, story teller, and the later Wells, pamphleteer, and, to this reader's way of thinking, the most interesting thing he has written since his brilliant autobiography.

A Pleasant Antidote

"Harlequin House," by Margery Sharp. [Little Brown, $2.50.] Published Wednesday.

This is an utterly fantastic, frivolous, gay tale, as full of inconsequential but amusing happenings as a good beehive is full of bees during bee working hours.

All sorts of unlikely things happen to the extremely unlikely characters—a girl as beautiful as she is clever and as clever as she is good; her lazy, charming brother who is just out of prison for selling dope which he believed was baking powder; a little old man who wore prize roses in his buttonhole, lovingly snipped each morn from the botanical gardens, and who from a job as an unsuccessful bookseller became the chief attraction, in kilts and with a sandwich board, of "Bonnie Scotland, Lunch, Teas, and Light Refreshments."

They have a pretty hard time eating regularly, but they—and their readers—have no trouble about the laugh a day that keeps the doctor away. It's all utterly inconsequential and designed to make you FORGET.

Thornton Wilder Whimsy

"The Merchant of Yonkers," by Thornton Wilder. [Harpers, $2.] Published Thursday.

Designed to make you laugh and forget might also be the label on this, the latest book to come from the pen of Thornton Wilder. "The Merchant of Yonkers" is utterly different from "Our Town," that supremely beautiful and moving drama rooted deep in the American soul.

"The Merchant of Yonkers" [freely adapted from a German adaptation based upon an English original by John Oxenford] is farce at its farciest, with mistaken identities, trapdoors, men hiding in cupboards, screens separating scenes which would be highly combustible if they met.

The action takes place in the 1880's when a designing woman went about catching her man as obviously as she goes about nowadays pretending she has designs on nothing except a career. The talk, too, is slapstick, a satire on slapstick, with one or two touches of the ingenuous frankness and simplicity in "Our Town" when the characters talk to the audience.

Life Story of a Famed Frontiersman in Early West Is a Notable Biography

"Fremont, Pathmarker of the West," by Allan Nevins. [Appleton-Century, $5.]

Allan Nevins.

"To explore more of the west than any other single man, to be a leading figure in the conquest of California, to be the first candidate of a great party for the presidency, to pen a book that helped in molding now populous communities, to rise from poverty to millions and sink to poverty again, to leave a name written across the geography of one-third of the continent—this constitutes an absorbing story." So writes Allan Nevins of John Charles Fremont, one of the most adventurous figures of our frontier history, and one of the most puzzling. Truly his story is absorbing, under the gifted pen of the author.

Prof. Nevins delineates the career of Fremont, the illegitimate son of an impulsive Virginia girl and a handsome French emigré, against the detailed and colorful background of his times, the type of era America will never see again. But the author does more. He is constantly attempting to illuminate the baffling character of Fremont, who could rise to dazzling heights of brilliance and fortune, and sink to abysmal depths.

"Fremont, Pathmarker of the West" undoubtedly will remain one of the few great biographies of this year, equal to Van Doren's "Benjamin Franklin" and James' "Andrew Jackson." J. H. T.

An Appraisal of Europe

"Europe on the Eve," by Frederick L. Schuman. [Knopf, $3.50.]

"Europe on the Eve" is perhaps the most complete, thorough, and analytical of any recent books on the diplomatic history of that troubled area. Every page is packed with factual material meticulously documented.

Prof. Schuman traces the rise of fascism and bolshevism and the decline of democracy in Europe with an appraising eye to all the significant details. Yet the book clearly charts the major sweep of events and pauses for analysis both apparently sound and extremely useful in the comprehension of the whole. Also there are finely written portraits of the leaders on the scene which accomplish in a few pages what some biographers seek in volumes.

If a single book is to be selected for an understanding of the present political strife in Europe, Prof. Schuman's work would be a good choice. L. W.

Selected Poems by Graves

"Collected Poems," by Robert Graves. [Random House, $2.50.]

Robert Graves, who is best known for his "I, Claudius," "Claudius the God," and "Count Belisarius," thinks of himself as a poet rather than as a writer of prose. The works presented here were selected from 22 of his published volumes and are regarded by him as his best work.

These poems have the vitality and the strength that distinguish Mr. Graves' prose works. In addition there is a haunting charm, a hint of which is to be found in the descriptive passages of his prose. C. L.

An Adventurous Life

"Born to Trouble," by Capt. Patrick A. Meade. [Putnam, $3.]

This is the light hearted story of one Irishman who has had a royal time in the far corners of the world. He was "born to trouble," as he puts it, but never for long, because of an almost supernatural ability to get out of jams and, with a laugh, move on to something more exciting.

Sliding down a rope of knotted sheets, Pat Meade escaped college at the age of 16. A year later he was a private in the Scots guard in Cairo. Within two years he was a seasoned member of the Egyptian camel corps and just as adept at desert fighting as the natives themselves.

At 20 he was fighting with the British in France, emerging a captain after four Christmases in the trenches as a machine gunner. Next he turned up as officer of a Ghurka regiment on the northwest frontier of India. Then, moving eastward as a member of the British intelligence, he wound up as a policeman in Singapore with enough adventures still ahead of him to fill two books.

Capt. Meade has led a fascinating, adventurous life and tells it extraordinarily well. There isn't a dull moment in 406 pages. P. W.

Four Volumes Open Vistas in Varied Fields

BY WILL DAVIDSON.

History has many children, and four of them find able biographers in these books. These are not histories in the usual sense. However, they provide an enlightening comparison of the methods by which authors attempt to reach the largest possible group of readers.

Natural Resource Problem

"American Earth," by Carleton Beals. [Lippincott, $3.]

For many years Carleton Beals has roamed the subtropical world, reporting its beauties, its foibles, its tragedies. Now he comes home and cries passionately against what goes on here. A little too passionately, perhaps, to serve his purpose as a wise guide to a better way. Nevertheless, Mr. Beals has a point, and a disturbing one. In what he calls "the biography of a nation," the author lays great stress on the tragedy of greed and waste which has given America a natural resource problem. Our dust bowls and our denuded forest areas, our eroded farms and our depleted soil are barren monuments to a lack of foresight, he says. When Mr. Beals gets into the political side of his story he becomes less authentic and convincing because he becomes more passionate.

Wonders of the Heavens

"The Story of Astronomy," by Arthur Draper and Marion Lockwood. [Dial Press, $3.]

Arthur Draper and Marion Lockwood have achieved an intimate relationship with their public through years of work in Hayden planitarium, New York. It gives to their printed work a lucidity and a friendly understandability that is priceless in a scientific book designed for popular consumption. Wisely they only touch upon the more abstruse branches of their science, preserving for the more familiar ones the fresh, detailed story of the wonders of the sky. This is just about the finest introductory book to a fascinating field of study that has been published in years.

Ancient Andean Culture

"Ancient Andean Life," by Edgar L. Hewett. [Bobbs Merrill, $4.] March selection of the Scientific Book club.

When Dr. Hewett chose to complete his trilogy on ancient American life with a new approach to Andean Indian civilization he left himself wide open to the criticism of his colleagues in archeology. He also put a few hurdles in the way of his neophyte readers, for his determination to forget the old romantic and Europeanized historical technique has given his book the air of having a chip on its shoulder.

Fortunately, the chip is not large and does not greatly divert attention from the remarkable study of Indian culture which this book offers. Dr. Hewett has studied ancient America long and faithfully, and the love he has for it cements his tripartite study into an invaluable contribution to archeological literature.

Tales of Buried Treasure

"Apache Gold and Yaqui Silver," by J. Frank Dobie. [Little, Brown, $3.50.]

Out of the silt pans and from the dented picks of our southwestern prospectors have come far more entrancing things than just nuggets of gold and silver. This book is a collection of some of them—the grim, the rollicking, the delightfully fantastic tales associated with lost mines and still buried treasure. Some of the finest illustrations to be found in any recent popular priced book help Mr. Dobie make this a memorable bit of entertainment.

America at War in 1917 Teaches a No. 1 Lesson

BY CARL J. WIEGMAN.

"America at War," by Frederic L. Paxson. [Houghton-Mifflin, $3.75.]

In the literature of the world war first came the memoirs of the generals and statesmen. Then followed the books of the experts—military, economic, and political. After that came the debunkers, several varieties of them.

For some time we have needed an honest, sober historian to take all those words about the war and digest them into a clear, concise account of what happened. Prof. Frederic L. Paxson has done just that in "America at War," the second volume of his series called "American Democracy and the World War." It is an especially timely book because, after all, the war was our No. 1 lesson in the armament and foreign policy questions of today.

Prof. Paxson draws no parallels between 1917 and 1939, but readers will not fail to draw their own. He shows how, months after we entered the war, President Wilson was still trying industriously to explain why we were in it. His task was not made easier by the fact that he had grave suspicions of the aims of the allied powers.

Nevertheless, the war was sold to the American people, and in nineteen months they put 4,791,172 men in the various military and naval services. It was an accomplishment beyond the hopes or even the dreams of anybody on April 6, 1917. The congress that voted the war resolution had no idea that a large army could be sent to France.

In the matter of censorship, espionage and sabotage, Prof. Paxson says, the people did their own policing. They were nearly unanimous, despite the vagueness and idealistic character of the war aims. But as the war machine rolled on, and the size of the task became apparent, bill after bill was passed to extend the power of the President. The patriotic madhouse in Washington simply had to be turned into a military dictatorship, even while men in France were fighting "to make the world safe for democracy."

Perhaps that is lesson No. 1 of "America at War."

'Regular Guy' Type of Girl Is Misguided

BY DORIS BLAKE.

[Copyright: 1939: By The Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Syndicate, Inc.]

This week we seem to have men expressing themselves on the subject of women and what they make of them or can't make of them. Nor do we know a better diversion for our own sex than giving an ear to what the other half may have to say.

Today it is Baritone Jerry Cooper holding forth on the subject of girls with ambition to be "regular guys," as our baritone hero puts it. Mr. Cooper does not believe it to be a worthy ambition, we take it, because of the threat it holds for the extremists.

Some girls think that they have scaled the popularity heights, avers Mr. Cooper, when they can be tagged as "one of the boys," when they can swear, chain-smoke, drink like a stevedore, and hurl epithets around like a champ.

Where do you meet them, Mr. Cooper? They escape us somehow.

We do appreciate your point about men disliking "this alleged broad-mindedness that often is carried too far for comfort." We don't like that in women, either. We don't like them going off the deep end on sex, conversationally, either.

Yes, and we agree that the world is full of finer ambitions for women. We think it a far nicer compliment, say, to be voted by the other sex "a regular woman" rather than a "regular guy."

But we're glad you introduced the theme, J. C., since it may set a woman or two thinking.

U. of C. Senior Co-ed Wins Blackfriars Score Girl Contest

Miss Marion Elisberg, 20 years old, a senior, was selected last night as head score girl for the annual Blackfriars show to be presented at the University of Chicago April 21, 22, 28, and 29. As head score girl she will sell musical scores.

Miss Elisberg, who lives at 5529 Hyde Park boulevard, was one of ten co-eds contesting for the honor. The girls appeared at the Blackhawk restaurant, where Bob Crosby, orchestra leader, and two other judges picked the winner.

As alternates Miss Betty Jane Watson, 21, of Cleveland, O., and Miss Dorothy Marquis, also 21, of 5521 University avenue, seniors, were chosen. Miss Elisberg will be awarded a month's trip to the New York fair by a watch company.

Miss Elizabeth McKay Cushing Will Be Bride

BY JUDITH CASS.

FROM New York comes an engagement announcement of great interest to Chicagoans, although both the young woman and her fiancé live in the east. She lived here as a child and she and her parents have kept up their Chicago associations, coming back frequently for visits.

The announcement is being made by Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Cushing of 720 Park avenue and it concerns the engagement of their daughter, Elizabeth McKay, to Joseph Richardson Dilworth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dewees W. Dilworth of New York.

Miss Cushing is a great-granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Robert McKay of Chicago and a granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Albert W. Goodrich, also of Chicago. Mr. Goodrich was a fire commissioner and head of the steamship line of that name. Miss Cushing's paternal grandparents were Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Cushing of Princeton, Ill. She made her debut on Long Island in the spring of 1937 and late that summer came to Lake Forest, where she was entertained with Debutante Betty Armour at a dinner-dance given by the William H. Mitchells.

Miss Cushing, called Bunny by her family and close friends, now is attending the Finch Junior college in New York. She was graduated from the Chapin school in New York before she made her debut.

Dilworth Is Descendant of Gen. John A. Logan.

Mr. Dilworth is a graduate of St. Mark's school and of Yale, class of 1938. He is a member of The Fence club, Phi Beta Kappa, and Skull and Bones. He now is attending the Harvard law school. He and Miss Cushing do not plan to be married until after he finishes his law studies.

Mr. Dilworth's paternal grandmother is Mrs. Joseph R. Dilworth of New York and his maternal grandmother is Mrs. John A. Logan, also of New York. He is a great grandson of the late Gen. and Mrs. John A. Logan, who lived in Chicago shortly after the civil war.

Miss Cushing and Miss Armour have been intimate friends all their lives, and the former will be coming to Lake Forest this summer to be a bridesmaid when Miss Armour is married to Gerald Vanderbilt Hollins Jr. Miss Armour, daughter of the Lester Armours, and Mr. Hollins, whose home is in New York but who is working in Cleveland now, have set July as a tentative wedding date. It will be a home wedding.

N. Y. Symphony Concert Will Benefit Hospital.

News of what is certain to be a brilliant benefit next fall broke yesterday afternoon at a tea given by Mrs. William B. Greenlee and Mrs. Frederic W. Upham at the Casino for the three women's boards of the Children's Memorial hospital. Arthur G. Cable of the board of directors of the hospital told about the benefit, which is the first of the sort ever given by the groups of women that work for the hospital.

It is to be a concert by the New York Philharmonic orchestra on Sunday afternoon, Nov. 26, in the Auditorium theater. John Barbirolli will conduct. This will be the first time in many years that the New York orchestra has played in Chicago.

John P. Wilson, president of the hospital board, also spoke at the tea. He talked about the new clinic the building for which has been started. The proceeds of the concert will go towards this building fund.

Ginghams Give a Fresh Touch to House Coats

BY RHEA SEEGER.

There's a fragrant bakery freshness to checked gingham, especially in crisp cheery house coats. Red and white or china blue and white make some new arrivals that look good enough to eat.

Made with small, neat waistlines that are dramatized by the wide circular skirts, they'll make the best of breakfast companions and for weekend lounging about the house or in the garden. With a price mark way under five dollars, you'll really look much more expensive.

Crisp white ruffles of eyelet embroidery that look like the paper frills on a candy box trim the square neckline. The same white line accents the cuffs of the short but very full sleeves. A concealed zipper slides down the center of the skirt.

These new house gowns look like colonial costumes. Despite their good looks they are practical all purpose affairs. They'll tub with ease, stay crisp and cool looking till the end of summer, and then some. As a house dress or a kitchenette uniform or just as a summer time negligee, they're hard to equal.

Matched exactly in check pattern and color and even trimming of white are some fetching little slippers to complete the outfit. These, too, are so cleverly designed as to look like anything but a boudoir slipper . . . the heels are gracefully high and comfortable and the toe sections come smoothly high over the instep.

THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

Not long ago a friend of ours came home from the east all enthused about some soap she'd found in a shop down there. She thought it was one of the wonders of the world because each cake could be hung up after use, suspended from a suction cup that can be stuck to the smooth surface of the wall.

Which just proves that even to the ardent shopper fields on the other side of the fence look greener. Such soaps have been around Chicago for rather a long time—and very nice they are, too. The cakes are molded in the shape of a shell, the scents are awfully nice, and the quality of the soap is excellent.

The idea of being able to have the cake hung up is both practical and economical. It's always in its place and its place is a dry one, where it won't be wasting its life away in moisture!

Now these shell shaped cakes, which are bath size, have little sisters—in hand size. Each cake has a little hook at the top, which can be put through a loop on the little suction cup. The cups are in bathroom colors.

One woman uses these suction cups long after the soap is gone to keep her kitchen tidy. You can dangle measuring spoons, tea strainers, scouring pads and a dozen other little necessities from them. The cups cling like mad to the smooth porcelain upright above the drain board of the sink.

There are some marvelous cold cream soaps in this line, very bland and caressing to the dry skin. These are in three fragrances, of which the verbena is outstanding.

Father Is a Cop, Son a Killer in an Interesting Film

"SERGEANT MADDEN."

Produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Based on story, "A Gun in His Hand," by William A. Ulman Jr.
Presented at the Roosevelt theater.

By Mae Tinée.

Good Morning!

"I wanted to make a man of my son and instead I put a gun into the hands of a killer!"

Dedicated to "the cop on the beat," this picture tells a father and son story which, after a somewhat mawkish beginning, develops into a narrative of interest and action.

Shaun Madden, who for years has belonged to "New York's Finest," longs to see his son, Dennis, a member of the force. . . . The lad, a gangster at heart, DOES become a policeman—but a cop without honor and with a taste for blood.

It's not long before he runs berserker and is a problem—and a tragedy!—both to his father and the police department. . . . At last, leagued with the interests against which he has sworn to protect his fellow citizens, he becomes an outlaw.

The early scenes of the film show Sergt. Madden and his wife adopting the orphaned son of an officer who has been killed in line of duty, and, later, taking into the warm bosom of their home, a girl foundling. . . . The latter's mother turns up and, through the kindness of the Maddens, is able to return to Ireland with her baby.

Years pass. Mrs. Madden and the baby's mother both die. And Eileen [the foundling] comes over to live with Father Madden and his boys. . . . She falls in love with and marries Dennis. . . . And a sad time she has of it!

But enough of the story at this time.

Fine work is contributed by the entire cast. Mr. Beery is sincere and believable. He can play a nature's nobleman quite as aptly as a son of Old Nick. The reckless, adamantine hearted Dennis is terrifyingly and realistically portrayed by Alan Curtis. . . . Outstanding work is done by Marc Lawrence as "Piggy," a gangster. Laraine Johnson makes a pretty and appealing Eileen. Tom Brown is lovable as the adopted son.

The film's only weakness lies in the story—and some of the dialog.

Looking at Hollywood
By Ed Sullivan

Time and De Mille March On

Hollywood, Cal., April 14.—We were lunching in the new Paramount restaurant, air cooled and streamlined, because Georgia Tech's Frank Freeman, when he took over the boss spot, said that it might be indirect economy to get rid of the racket that made eating at Paramount an adventure in jangled nerves, and added the fillip of a nervous breakdown to the regular 65 cent lunch.

"How do you like it, Cecil?" Freeman asked De Mille.

"I've liked this spot for twenty-six years," said De Mille. "It was on this very spot that I directed my first moving picture 'The Squaw Man' in December, 1913. This then was a livery stable and Goldwyn and Lasky engaged one floor of the livery stable.

"For the scenery we had four canvas wings and two pieces of canvas. For the players we had five dressing rooms. For an electrician, we had the sun. Right there, where Sullivan is sitting, an old white horse was munching on hay and oats."

Time and De Mille march on. . . . Twenty-six years later, he has just completed "Union Pacific." There is one scene in it which he likes best because of its reminiscence value, a scene in which the Indians contrive to destroy a 50,000 gallon tank of water by the impact of a wrecked train.

"It's like the Red sea sequence in 'Ten Commandments'," he tells you and that is high praise because he liked that one best of all. Probably the train wreck-water tank sequence, to which he refers, cost more by itself in 1939, than the entire 1913 cost of "The Squaw Man," which he filmed for a total cost of $47,000.

Cecil Blount De Mille, now 58, was born to the theater, for his dad and mother both were playwrights and the elder De Mille was a partner of David Belasco. The son was born at Ashfield, Mass., and educated in the Pennsylvania Military academy at Chester, Pa., before going to New York for his dramatic training.

The fact that Cecil had been associated with Belasco in the writing of "The Return of Peter Grimm" so impressed Goldwyn and Lasky that they engaged him to direct "The Squaw Man," although he never had directed a picture and never had seen one directed. Neither had Goldwyn nor his brother-in-law, Lasky, vaudeville trumpet player. De Mille was signed for $100 a week and a vague promise of stock in a company capitalized at $20,000. Out of that, $10,000 was guaranteed as royalties to William Faversham for the screen rights of the play.

"The Squaw Man" scored immediately because it was one of the first five-reelers made and the public was fed up with a steady diet of two-reelers that ran the limited gamut of slapstick and cowboys and injuns. As a directorial achievement, it was negligible and when it was first shown, because of the cameraman's error in adjusting his time-stop, the figures danced crazily across the screen. The entire film had to be repasted by hand so that new sprocket holes could be inserted.

It was in "Warrens of Virginia" that De Mille really became an important contributor to the movies, and in "Dynamite" he advanced the industry by many years with the aid of Douglas Shearer. Up to "Warrens of Virginia," the photographic practice had been to light a set as boldly as the equipment made possible.

De Mille hit upon the daring thought of adding depths to photography by lighting only half of a player's face. Raymond Hatton served as the photogenic guinea pig. The legend is that Goldwyn and Lasky, when they received the completed film in the east, were stunned by the subdued lighting and shot a stormy wire to De Mille.

"Didn't you ever hear of Rembrandt lighting?" De Mille retorted. The third wire is supposed to have been signed by Goldwyn and read: "Why didn't you let us know about the Rembrandt lighting. Now we can charge twice as much for the picture." De Mille added: "They did."

"Dynamite" was a Hollywood milestone in development of sound because up to that picture, because of the noise of the camera, all sets were glass enclosed. The cameraman was stationed outside the glassed-in area so that the grinding noise of his machine would not insinuate itself on the sound track.

De Mille, when he saw the set-up, protested bitterly that this would cramp his freedom and make it impossible for him to move freely about the camera. "Wait a moment," interrupted Douglas Shearer, head of M.-G.-M.'s sound department, "You've given me an idea." He figured out a rough draft on paper, the camera inclosed in a sound-proofed hood. That single discovery was a stride forward.

Quite a character, this De Mille, and possibly the last of the Old Guard to affect leather puttees and an inverted cap when he directs a picture. . . . From Belasco he learned the value of persistent identification. Belasco wore a clergyman's collar. De Mille compromised on leather puttees. In his latest picture, "Buccaneers," which was not too successful, the veteran was shocked. There was one scene, the attack on New Orleans, and a very thrilling scene it was, too.

The Scotch regiment continued to advance in the face of a withering fire, one handing the flag to another as the pirates of Lafitte decimated their ranks. It was a typical De Mille scene and he loved it. When the picture reached England, the scene was scissored completely, London censors arguing that, while it testified to British bravery, it also indicated they lost the fight. De Mille was deeply shocked.

Wise Granting of Freedom Is Due the Child

If you want to avoid stubbornness and disobedience, give your child all the freedom you can and let him have his way wherever you can, within reason.

This was one of two suggestions given in a recent article. Because that idea always causes questions to come up and because some young mothers can't see how you can do it without your child running wild, I promised to elaborate on it today.

What we do not mean is indulging his every caprice, to his own misery and other people's. What we do mean is to say "Yes" whenever you can, and "No" as seldom as possible. Avoid "don't." Instead, divert energy and substitute something to fill the need of the moment.

This attitude makes life with your child easier and more interesting. Would you let your little boy try lapping his milk like kitty from a bowl on the floor? Do you let your small daughter wash when you do, even if it's a little trouble? Do you let your son take chairs and blankets and make a tent on the living room floor? Do you allow papers to be cut and the house to be used by your child? These are legitimate activities and experiments. To allow every possible activity that is the outgrowth of a child's interest and need for expression is giving him his way, to be sure, but it is a natural, right way.

This feeling that you are on his side, that you know what it's all about, will rob your child of the need to resist, to hold out.

And now let's end up with a few don'ts, even though I'm not keen about "don'ts":

Don't pit your will against your child's.

Don't make wild statements you won't want to support, such as "You can't leave the table until you've eaten every bit of food before you." No ultimatums.

Don't make emotional scenes over an issue.

Indeed, don't make issues of behavior or commands.

Be quiet, tactful, gentle with a child who is being stubborn.

And remember that a child who is tired and hungry may act almost any way as a result of it.

Patience is a fine handmaiden for parents and nurses. Send a stamped, addressed envelope for it. Address Mrs. Gladys Bevans, The Chicago Tribune, Chicago, Ill.

GASOLINE ALLEY—NINA'S ROUND

GOOTCH, CAN YOU IMAGINE NINA AND SKEEZIX PULLING ANYTHING SO MEAN AND LOW DOWN?
IT'S A PRETTY GOOD JOKE, I THINK.
WHAT! WHEN WE HAVE TO WALK HOME FROM THE DANCE AFTER DRIVING THERE IN OUR OWN CAR?
YES, JESSICA, BUT THEY WERE RIGHT. AT MIDNIGHT IT'S FRIDAY — AN' THEIR CAR.
I GET A KICK OUT OF IT!
I DON'T. I THINK IT'S DESPICABLE!
YOU'RE JUST TOO EASY, GOOTCH. YOU OUGHT TO STAND UP FOR YOUR RIGHTS!
THERE'S NO USE GETTIN' ALL HET UP. IT DOESN'T GET YOU ANY PLACE.

These Simple Tests Reveal Posture Faults

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

[Copyright, 1939: By The Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Syndicate, Inc.]

Women are saying these days: "Yes, I've gone all over town and can't find a decent thing to wear!" Fifty million dresses, coats, and suits can't be wrong, so it's fair enough to assume one's very own faulty posture may be what's wrong. Very often it is, in fact.

A couple of years hence, if not before, a woman without good posture is just going to be banned off the face of the map, pictorially speaking. A Posture Week—May 1 to 6—when schools and colleges all over the country will lay particular stress on and give special instruction in posture, gives you an idea of what this country needs.

A simple method of testing whether one's posture is correct is to stand facing a wall with the hands placed against the front of the thighs. Check to see which part of the body touches the wall first. If it is the abdomen the posture is very poor. If it is the chest, well and good. A better test may be made by standing with the back against the wall and heels, shoulders, and head touching it, with the hands pressed against the sides of the thighs. If your posture is good, there should not be more space between the wall and the waistline at the back than sufficient to pass the flattened hand in and out.

SYNOPSIS.

Ross Craddock's father turned Craddock House into flats and installed his old maid cousins, Mary and Lucy Craddock, in a flat apiece, on either side of the one occupied by Ross. After Mary's death Lucy prepared to take a trip, despite an order from Ross to vacate her flat because she objects to his attentions to her foolish young niece, Mavis Grey. Their cousin, Peter Renshaw, is staying in Mary's flat while he settles her estate. Lucy gives her cousin, Lee Fenton, permission to use her flat while she is away. Lee is in love with Peter. Rush, the porter, mutters belligerently to Lee against Ross. Mrs. Green, the charwoman, says she is ill and asks Lee for a drink of brandy. That evening Peter prevents Bobby Foster, Mavis' suitor, from making a scene in a night club where Mavis is with Ross. Peter is awakened in the night by a crash. He sees Mavis running from Ross' flat and Ross cut and bleeding. Mavis had thrown a decanter at him. Peter lets Mavis stay the rest of the night in his flat. Later he is again awakened and sees Mavis again coming from Ross' flat. She says she went to retrieve her purse. Lee awakens from a nightmare to find herself covered with blood. Her bloody footprints lead from Ross' door. Lee knows she walks in her sleep. In terror she washes away the blood stains and goes to tell Peter. Ross' valet arrives and finds Ross has been shot and killed. An old maid tenant tells how she saw Mavis coming from Ross' flat twice. Rush turns over to the police a cigaret case he found belonging to Bobby Foster. Lucy, who didn't go away after all, admits coming to Craddock House after 2 a. m. and seeing a figure hurrying out the door and going up to find Ross murdered. She fled after finding Mavis' compact. Lucy tells that Ross was married years before to an actress, that he was never divorced, and had lately stopped paying her. Bobby Foster disappears and he is charged with the murder. Mavis also disappears. Ross' ex-wife is found in Birmingham and she has an alibi for the time of the murder. Bobby Foster calls Peter and begs for a loan. Peter persuades him to give himself up. While Peter is with the inspector Mrs. Green calls. She says there is something she withheld because of fear. The inspector tells her to come right over, but she doesn't appear and can't be found. Peter learns from Lucy that Mary had old photographs of Ross' wife. Peter looks them up and finds one of her in the rôle of a charwoman—the image of Mrs. Green. Her sister is suspected of impersonating her in Birmingham. About to be arrested Ross' wife is killed by a train.

INSTALMENT XLII.

THE MURDER PLANS.

"Twenty years ago I played the part of a charwoman called Mrs. Brown. It wasn't much of a play, but I got the best notices I ever had. Well, I took a fancy to play the part again, and I called myself Mrs. Green.

"What I thought was, if Ross wouldn't give me my allowance I could run him in for a divorce, and then he'd have to give me alimony. I hadn't any money to pay detectives, so I had to look about and find the evidence myself. Well, up to a fortnight ago I hadn't got any further and I was getting right down sick of the whole thing.

"And then I found Ross' key sticking in the door of his flat and I nipped it out and put it in my pocket. I got my opportunity a day or two after that. Peterson had the day off, and Ross went out after breakfast and said he wouldn't be back till late. Rush had Peterson's key, but he keeps his times like a piece of clockwork, so I knew just when he'd be out of the way. Well, I had a piece of luck. Ross had left his bunch of keys lying out on the writing table, so I only had to help myself. I went through the drawers, but there wasn't anything there. All I found was the pistol he kept in one of them and I didn't bother about that till afterwards.

"And then I opened the despatch box, and there, right on top, was a letter from the lawyer, Mr. Prothero, wanting Ross to make his will. What it amounted to was that he'd better hurry up and make a will if he didn't want me to come in for all that money of his mother's that wasn't tied up.

"I went on turning out the despatch box. The bottom of it was full of letters from other women. He had kept theirs—he hadn't kept any of mine. That's when I made up my mind to kill him. I put everything back, and I went away and thought out the best way of doing it.

"I got it all planned. I made up my mind I'd do it the next time he brought a girl home to supper, because I meant it to look as if they'd quarreled and he'd shot himself.

"The way I planned it was this. I'd been cleaning up Mr. and Mrs. Connell's flat after they had gone away on their holiday. That was the Tuesday, and I knew Ross was bringing some one back because I heard him tell Peterson to put out champagne and two glasses. Miss Lucy Craddock was going off abroad, so it all suited well enough—one less person on the landing. But when I came past just to make sure she was gone I found Miss Lee Fenton was there. I told her I'd got one of my turns and I didn't think I'd be fit to come on the Wednesday. Then I went off and stayed in the King's Arms till about a quarter past nine, and when I got to my room there were half a dozen people ready and willing to swear I'd drunk myself stupid and was good for a dozen hours sleep.

"I'd a ground floor room and I always locked my door. I let them hear me snoring for a bit and then I got out of the window and came along back to Craddock House. Rush doesn't lock up till eleven, and for twenty minutes before that he'll be putting his wife all ready for the night. I had only to watch for the street being clear and walk in. Craddock House has an alley way running between it and the next house. I watched from there. Then I just ran in and up the stairs and let myself into the Connells' flat, which was No. 5 and right underneath Ross'.

"I heard the front door round about twelve o'clock. I stood on a chair and looked through the fan light over the door. That was Mr. Peter Renshaw coming in. It was an hour later when Ross came and he had Mavis Grey with him. I heard them go into his flat and shut the door, and right there it came over me what was I going to do if she stayed there all night? I hadn't thought of that before somehow and it made me mad with rage. I made up my mind that I would shoot them both and try and make it look as if Ross had done it—I thought I owed him that.

"You see, I'd planned to shoot him with his own pistol. I once had to practice shooting for a show I was in and I turned out quite a good shot, so I knew I could manage it all right. I waited a bit so as to let them get on with the champagne, and then, just as I was thinking about it, I heard a crash right over my head. I ran to the door and opened it to listen, and there was Mavis Grey calling out, and Mr. Renshaw out of his room hushing her up, and Ross talking queer and thick as if he was drunk. And in the end Mavis went into Mr. Renshaw's flat and they shut the door.

"Nothing could have been better for me. I made up my mind to wait till two o'clock, and as soon as I heard Mrs. Connell's dining room clock strike I came out of the flat. I turned off the light on that landing, and when I got up on to Ross' landing I turned out that light, too—that was in case I had to run for it. I had the key of Ross' flat all ready but I didn't have to use it because the door was ajar.

"He must have gone back in and left it like that, and when I looked round the sitting room door I could see why. The light was on, and Ross was sitting right underneath it straddling across a chair with his arms along the back and his chin down on them. There was a lot of dried blood on his forehead and cheek, and his shirt was in such a mess that I thought some one had done my job for me. He didn't move his head or take any notice of my coming in, he just sat there staring.

"I had gloves on my hands. I went to the writing table and got the pistol out of the drawer where Ross kept it. I came over with the pistol in my hand and when I was a yard away he put up his head with a jerk and said, 'Who's there?' He took hold of the back of the chair to pull himself up and I thought, 'It's now or never.'

"There was something very heavy passing along the embankment—all the windows rattled with it. I shot him like that, and he fell down on to the floor and never moved. That was the only mistake I made. I was on the left of him and I fired too soon. I ought to have come round on his right and then every one would have believed he had done it himself. But I had to think about the lorry because that was what I was counting on to cover up the sound of the shot. I put the pistol in his hand quickly and came away. I left the light burning and the door of the flat ajar.

"I crept downstairs and opened the street door. I didn't make a sound. I was afraid to risk shutting the street door in case of waking Mr. Pyne, so I left it just pushed to and ran down the steps and along the alley way. It took me half an hour to get back to my room. I didn't see how any one could possibly suspect me, and I don't see now how they did.

"I planned to disappear as soon as it was safe. Annie was getting worried and I didn't dare leave her alone too long. But I had to wait till after the inquest. I wrote to her to come down and meet me on the Saturday. She was to give up her room, and I sent her a letter for my old landlady at Doncaster to say I was coming back. Annie went back to her home. She'd given out she was away nursing a sister who was ill. She never knew anything—I'm dying and I swear she didn't. She only thought she was helping me to get my divorce. I'm sorry about Annie, but I'm not sorry about Ross. I'd do it again tomorrow."

I've eaten snails and crow meat and a few other unpopular delicacies, and they weren't bad, either. But somehow I can't work up any enthusiasm for rattlesnake meat. It's too bad, for a few hardy epicures assure me that it's delicious, and my favorite cheese and food specialties store carries it.

The wild bramble jelly I tried out on some house guests recently was so popular that I've listed it among my "good things not to be forgotten." Brand name upon request. . . . And speaking of unusual jellies, if you're willing to spend $2 to serve six persons 2 teaspoons of jelly apiece at a tea party, here's what you do: Buy a set of 6 tiny jars of jelly in pistachio, sage, violet petal, peppermint, mint, and savory flavors. You may buy larger jars of any of these jellies at a dollar apiece. A downtown store carries them.

PUT THE COVER ON THE PAN when cooking greens. It has been found that most of the vitamin content is retained that way. But leave the cover off when cooking other green vegetables, peas, asparagus, Brussels sprouts, beans, and the rest.

Spinach and similar greens may be cooked in a steamer without loss of color or food value. Steaming damages color and flavor of some vegetables, but it's probably the best method for cooking carrots, potatoes, squash, wax beans, parsnips, beets, and greens, because it permits no great losses of nutrients, that is, if the steaming isn't prolonged beyond the point where the vegetables are just tender.

Never add soda to vegetables to preserve color. It isn't necessary to use artificial means if you do the cooking right in the first place. And soda may make the vegetables all slippery and slimy. Worse than that, it may destroy the food value.

Wearability Is Chief Charm

WOMAN'S AND MISS' FROCK.

Wearability is the chief charm of this daytime frock. It may be worn around home, out shopping, and to many of the strictly informal social occasions every one attends. Its lines are quite tailored, but you will be surprised at how dressy this model can be.

At the left is a softly tailored version with a heart shaped neckline that is edged in either braid or lace. Buttons form a row down the front of the frock, and there is a self-fabric belt at the waist. Otherwise there is no detail. It's a simple style to sew and makes up very well in washable silk prints and in cottons and linens.

The woman with a more mature silhouette will like the version at the right. Its V neckline is given a pointed collar that contrasts, as do the cuffs on the moderately puffed sleeves. The belt extends only from the sides, leaving the long line unbroken down the front. Plaits are employed to great advantage in the skirt. Cottons and wash silks will make up beautifully and checked materials are obviously good choices.

Style No. 2653 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, and 20, and 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, and 46 inches bust measurement. Size 36 requires 3½ yards of 39 inch material, with ⅝ yard of 39 inch contrasting for the collar and cuffs.

This Comfortable Cardigan Perfect for Warmer Days

BY JEAN MACDONALD.

Women with hand knitted cardigan preferences always have room for one more in their wardrobe, especially if it is knitted of a soft, lightweight wool of the two ply variety. The ribbing creates a high waistline effect which is meeting with greater favor every season. The remainder of the body is knitted in the stockinette stitch. Short puffed sleeves make the sweater ideal for warm weather wear.

For instructions for knitting the cardigan, No. X-240, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to the Needlework Bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 Fifth avenue, New York City.

Child Logic.

Some children were quarreling and a passerby asked what was the trouble.

"We're fighting about Hitler," explained one of them.

"Who is Hitler?" inquired the adult, curious to see what the answer would be.

"O, don't you know?" inquired one of the younger children. "Hitler's king of Hitaly."

Viewpoints.

John Pratt, tall, blond young Chicago artist who did the costumes for the famous WPA swing Mikado, is designer of costumes for this year's University of Chicago Blackfriar show April 21-22 and 28-29. When Gertrude Stein was visiting the University of Chicago campus several years ago Thornton Wilder introduced Pratt to her and showed her and Alexander Woollcott some of his work.

"The most talented artist I have seen since I left Paris," Miss Stein is quoted as having said. "He is by far the best draughtsman I have found in America."

Woollcott, a conservative in art, looking at some of Pratt's modern, highly individual conceptions, retorted: "I see. But Gertrude, can he draw?"

The Late Miss Lunt.

Chicagoans and Evanstonians who remember the late Cornelia Gray Lunt, long Evanston's first lady, who died in 1934 at the age of 91, will enjoy Mr. Woollcott's piece about her in the current Atlantic Monthly, written in the best Woollcottian vein.

The last time we saw Miss Lunt she received us from bed. Not that she was ill. The occasion was more of the nature of a levee. It was, we recall, rather like calling on a debutante after a late party. Miss Lunt, who was approaching 90, wore a feminine pastel bed jacket, her white hair was beautifully coiffed, the room was filled with flowers, the telephone at her elbow rang frequently, and a great disarray of letters, the offerings in the latest mail, lay on the counterpane.

We couldn't make her annual birthday party, but shortly after she sent us a photograph which we still treasure. It shows Miss Lunt, eager eyed and smiling, completely surrounded by flowers, birthday offerings from friends and admirers, that poured into the old house overlooking the lake in Evanston each year as her anniversaries became increasingly important.

Hall of Science, Industry Awes U. S. Notables

"The showplace not only of Chicago but of the world!"

That is what Mayor Kelly called the Museum of Science and Industry in Jackson park yesterday. He addressed several hundred scientific and industrial leaders of the nation who came to attend a preview of the marvels newly housed in the $8,000,000 structure. These leaders came as members of guests of the Commercial Club of Chicago, under whose auspices the preview was held.

This dream of the late Julius Rosenwald has now become a magic reality, Dr. Philip Fox, the director, told his distinguished visitors.

"But it is not finished," Dr. Fox went on. "I hope it never will be. For if it ever is we shall have reached a point of stagnation."

Recalling Augustus St. Gaudens' appraisal of the Columbian Exposition building as the finest thing since the Parthenon, Dr. Fox told his visitors that he felt its new interior matched, in a manner, the beauty of the exterior.

Sculptured bronze plaques relieve the severity of the stainless steel walls of the central entrance.

"The shining steel is not gay, not passionate or tender, but it has nobility and dignity," Dr. Fox said.

The gleaming marble walls are in keeping with the theme of the museum, engraved high above the visitor in the central rotunda: "Science Discerns the Laws of Nature—Industry Applies Them to the Needs of Man."

The newly developed sections include transportation, power, agriculture, textiles, forestry, the medical sciences, physics and chemistry, printing and the graphic arts, geology and mining.

These exhibits reflect the swift parallel advances of science and industry. They conjure up such phrases as "the speed age," "the electrical age," and "the age of science." The exhibits swiftly caught the imagination of the visitors.

Big industrialists who spent the first few minutes chatting with associates or competitors about business soon were captivated by the graphic and romantic story of transportation. They paused to examine ancient palanquins in which ladies of rank were carried; they gazed fondly on the model T Ford which was the biggest automobile seller of all time; they lingered over the full sized demonstration of the running gear, with driving wheels and steam distribution of a giant new Chicago and Eastern Illinois locomotive.

Dr. Arthur Compton, noted physicist of the University of Chicago and Nobel prize winner, forgot his cosmic ray researches and studied the story of agriculture. But he, too, found the story of transportation the most intriguing.

"They have done a wonderful job," he said, "in developing this section on transportation."

Meanwhile other visitors took trips through the miniature coal mine. They viewed the giant press presented by THE TRIBUNE and which is in process of assembly. This press recently was used for regular editions of THE TRIBUNE. Other guests studied the great Foucault pendulum suspended by a 65 foot cable from the roof, or gazed in wonderment in the medical section at a graphic demonstration [in model form] of an appendectomy from the incision to the final stitch.

Here too they had an opportunity to study the new "dissectible woman." This life size model of a female figure may be completely taken apart and reassembled. A giant model of the human ear, six feet high, with all the inner parts in view attracted the attention of many.

The great museum, Dr. Fox pointed out, is expected to do more than instruct and entertain.

"Our task," he said, "is to place things here that will be essential and beneficial to the young people who will come here, so that they will find new methods and means to benefit humanity. We hope that this institution may kindle in some youth the spark of genius, supply the clews to the solution of many problems, give to some craftsman the inspiration of invention, and give to all who come within its walls realization of the majesty of thought and the nobility of labor."

Besides Mayor Kelly and Dr. Fox the visitors were addressed by Rufus C. Dawes, president; Alfred T. Carton, president of the Commercial club; Robert J. Dunham, president of the Chicago Park District. Lessing J. Rosenwald and William Rosenwald, sons of the founder, attended.

According to CULBERTSON

[Copyright: 1939: By Ely Culbertson.]

"Dear Mr. Culbertson: The enclosed hand, which occurred in a recent tournament, caused much discussion between my partner and myself, inasmuch as it resulted in a very bad board. Most pairs in the tournament reached three no trump which, of course, is hard to miss, but it is interesting to note what a difference would be made in the play of the hand by shifting the seven and eight of diamonds in the East-West hands. Your expression of an opinion as to the offender in this case will, I feel sure, be helpful in settling a sore spot in a long standing partnership.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 club	Pass	1 no trump	2 diamonds
2 hearts	Pass	2 no trump	Pass
Pass	Pass

"West opened the diamond king and, when it was allowed to hold, shifted to a club. East won and returned the diamond seven. Declarer ducked and West could not help himself, but had to overtake with the diamond eight. He exited by leading another club. Declarer won in his own hand and led the queen of hearts. East covered and dummy's ace won. Three rounds of clubs now made it difficult for West to discard. He followed to one round and let go one diamond and one spade. Declarer led a heart to the jack, dropping West's ten, then played the ace and jack of diamonds. West was forced on lead with the diamond queen and had to return a spade. Declarer let this ride to his own queen and thereby made two spade tricks to give him an overtrick on his less-than-game contract.

"H. Q., Pittsburgh."

The responsibility for failing to reach the laydown game contract must be placed squarely on North's shoulders. North undoubtedly worked on the theory that he had opened the bidding and later had made a free "reverse bid" of the higher ranking heart suit. He probably argued to himself that this sequence fully revealed his strength and, as a matter of fact, he was right. But this did not excuse his excessive timidity in stopping one trick short of game when his partner had shown strength. From North's point of view, South's rebid of no trump, in the face of the diamond overcall, should have been impressive. Surely South would not choose that action unless he were well prepared for a diamond lead. North, himself not only had control of three suits, but had a five card club suit that presumably would be easy to establish and which might very well produce five tricks. Thus, regardless of the implied strength of North's bidding, he should have taken the concrete action of putting the partnership into a game contract.

As to the play, I cannot see that the seven of diamonds, as against the eight, had the slightest bearing. Let us give East the eight of diamonds and West the seven, as my correspondent suggests. West's opening lead of the diamond king holds and the club shift is made, East winning with the king. Now East returns the diamond eight. Declarer puts up the ace and takes the heart finesse, capturing West's king. The clubs are run off as before, declarer discarding a heart and a spade. With five cards left in all hands, declarer's are the Q-7 of spades, the jack of hearts, and the J-4 of diamonds. West holds the K-8 of spades and Q-10-9 of diamonds. Declarer now leads a heart to his jack and, at this trick, West cannot afford to blank the spade king, hence must let go a diamond. Declarer now can make an end-play in either of two suits, spades or diamonds. He can lead a spade to the ace and return a spade, throwing West on lead and forcing a diamond return, or can throw West in with a diamond and force a lead from the spade king. As a matter of fact, East could have had the 10-9-8 of diamonds instead of the 7-6-5 and it would not have have made any difference.

Here's something new in refrigerator jars—a set of three low, round ones, each with a capacity of a quart and all having tops that are absolutely air tight. You don't have to clamp or screw them on, either. Just press them into place and they're held tight by suction as a complete vacuum is created inside the jar.

Although the tops fit like a safe door they can be removed simply by inserting the point of a knife under them. Try the jars and you'll soon want more.

BOXERS MOVE ON DUBLIN FOR EUROPE'S TITLE TOURNEY

BOYS OF TWELVE NATIONS TO SEEK TRIP TO CHICAGO

Battle Golden Gloves Team May 12.

BY STEWART OWEN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DUBLIN, April 14.—An army of amateur boxers, from the Mediterranean sea to the Baltic, is moving on this historic city today for the international championship tournament which will start Wednesday. While the heads of governments are discussing war, Dublin seems only interested in the outcome of the five days' boxing after which will be chosen the eight boys who will meet Chicago's Golden Glovers in the Chicago Stadium May 12.

Gen. W. R. E. Murphy, president of the Irish Amateur Boxing association, already has received entries from twelve nations. Before the opening of the tournament he anticipates entries from four other countries. Teams now entered represent England, Germany, Italy, Poland, Finland, Estonia, Lithuania, Latvia, the Netherlands, Belgium, Sweden, and Ireland. More than seventy champions are registered for the tournament and England, for the first time, will send a complete team.

Sports Recognize No Politics.

England did not send a team to the 1937 tournament in Milan, Italy, when the first All-European team was chosen to meet the Chicago fighters. At that time the English association did not deem it advisable to send its boxers to Italy where, on the final day of the Milan tournament, the Italians were celebrating the first year of the conquest of Ethiopia, an invasion England had opposed.

Perhaps England now has a political reason, the recent bombings in London, not to send its amateur boxers to Dublin, but sports having no alliance to politics, that has not been considered. Indeed, it may be surprising to many in Chicago to learn that from the inception of the Irish Amateur Boxing association under the guiding genius of Gen. Murphy, all thirty-two counties in the island have held membership. In this respect, Ireland, by its inclusion of the North Ireland counties in Ulster with those of Eire, has set an example all nations well might follow.

Kolcznski Fame Permanent.

Among the entries received by Gen. Murphy, names which will be familiar to Chicagoans who attend Golden Gloves are Michael Murach, Herbert Nurnberg, and Herbert Runge of Germany; Guido Nardecchia and Ulderico Sergo of Italy, Antoni Kolcznski of Poland, Olli Lehtinen of Finland, and Olle Tannenberg of Sweden.

Sergo, Murach, and Nurnberg were winners against Chicago in 1937. Runge, knocked out by Lem Franklin that year, came back last spring to win an international Golden Gloves championship by defeating Dan Merritt.

Kolcznski of Warsaw, Poland, will be remembered as long as amateur boxing endures, for it was he who knocked out Jimmy O'Malley, Chicago's Golden Gloves intercity champion and winner of the National A. A. U. welterweight title last year.

An Elaborate Program.

Four teams already have arrived and worked out today. Others will arrive tonight while the complete list will be known by Tuesday. Elaborate preparations have been made to entertain the visiting boxers and officials with a program that will last throughout next week. All visitors have received passes which permit travel without charge on Dublin's street car system. A reception for the teams will be held Monday night in Dublin castle. The lord mayor of Dublin will greet the visitors Tuesday.

The Irish Amateur Boxing association will entertain the officials of the

Some folks find joy in the beautiful spring,
Its fleece clouded skies and robins that sing;
They laugh with delight when silvery showers
Softly fall on the gayly hued flowers.

Rhythmically sways the filmy leafed trees;
The pleasure spring gives them none other surpasses,
But all it brings me is just sulphur 'n molasses.

Ten Years Ago Today—After steadfastly denying for two days that he planned to get married, Babe Ruth took out a license to wed Mrs. Claire Hodgson, a widow and former actress. . . . The Cubs were quoted at 5 to 2 to win the National league championship and the White Sox were 10 to 1 not to win the pennant.

CUBS AREN'T ANY TOO HAPPY OVER FACING MR. LYONS

Sox Don't Care Much for Mr. Lillard, Either.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

Ted Lyons will pitch for the White Sox against the Cubs this afternoon in Comiskey park. This plan brings no cheer to the Cubs, who remember distinctly what happened the last time they faced Ted.

Gene Lillard will pitch for the Cubs against the White Sox. This knowledge causes White Sox to flip into background alibis when they recall what Gene did to them the last time he faced them. They claimed Gene was throwing out of a dust storm.

Ted last faced the Cubs in El Paso, Tex., on April 5. He held the Cubs, who had just hammered out four straight victories over the Sox, to one run and four hits in five innings. Two of the hits and a force play scored the only run the Cubs made that day. Thornton Lee finished the game, which ended 4 to 1 for the Sox's fourth victory in ten 1939 games with the Cubs.

Gene Was Good that Day.

Gene last faced the Cubs in the first game of the road trip back from California. In Yuma, Ariz., on March 31, the converted third baseman pitched nine innings to shut out the Sox, 2 to 0. He yielded a scratch hit in the first inning and it promptly was wiped out by a double play. The Sox got a single in the third inning and it, too, was blotted out by a double play. Two more singles, to bring the total to the final four, were made after two were out in the fifth. Lillard walked none and faced only twenty-nine batsmen, only two more than the minimum.

Both Lyons and Lillard have showed excellent form since the Sox and Cubs parted company after the El Paso game. As a consequence, the game this afternoon should present a very classy pitching clash.

First Game Is Postponed.

A game could have been played yesterday. The Cubs have played on three worse days this spring, including their last road game in Kansas City, where it was just as damp and twelve degrees colder. Even so, yesterday supplied no setting for a ball game.

Most of the Cubs spent a leisurely day, but Coach Roy Johnson conducted a private school for invalids during the early afternoon. He worked out with Earl Whitehill, veteran lefty star who is recovering rapidly from a fractured ankle, Dick Bartell, who is reported recovered from a series of bruises, and Leonard Merullo, "Bill Jurges' double," whom many are doping as the Cubs' regular shortstop in a year or so. Merullo has had a sore arm all spring.

Bartell, who has missed all of the spring exhibition games except two intraclub contests in Avalon on March 11 and 12, says he is determined to crowd Steve Mesner out of the picture on opening day next Tuesday and expects to be able to play for an indefinite span.

Dizzy to Start Monday.

Manager Gabby Hartnett is standing by his decision to start Dizzy Dean in the Monty Stratton game Monday but is not sure about who he will ask to follow Dean. He also is doubtful about who will work tomorrow. Clay Bryant needs work, but he has not decided just when Clay will work.

Before he got into the big money Bryant was one of the training camp's most lively figures. Now that he has become one of the five figure big shots, he is not so aggressive. In common with many pitchers after they get into the big dough, Clay is said to have adopted a policy of conserving his resources until "the games mean something."

Pitchers Al Epperly and Newell Kimball were released to Milwaukee on option yesterday.

You'll Have Plenty of Company Monday, Monty

Monty Stratton, brilliant young White Sox pitcher, who never will pitch again because of the loss of his right leg in a hunting accident, gazes out over the scene of his triumphs on the mound—Comiskey park. Monday the big park will present a different picture as Chicago fans, north and south side alike, gather for the Stratton benefit game between the Cubs and Sox. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

BOLDEN WHIPS OSCAR RANKIN IN 12 ROUND BOUT

Nate Bolden, 1937 Intercity Golden Gloves middleweight winner, last night became Illinois' leading contender for Solly Krieger's world title. He won the honor by defeating Oscar Rankin in a twelve round battle in White City. It was one of the best fights in a long time in the south side ring.

The bout was one of few all-colored contests presented in Chicago and the verdict was popular. The decision was split. Referee Dave Miller voting 62-58 and Judge James Lynch 65-55 for Bolden, and Judge John Bray scoring for Rankin, 62-58.

Though contracts specified a weight of not more than 160 pounds, Rankin came in at three more than this figure. Bolden weighed 155 pounds.

Chester Rutecki, of the Catholic Youth Organization, 1936 Chicago Golden Gloves welterweight champion, celebrated his return to the ring by hammering out a five round decision over Johnny Shaw of the Savoy A. C. in the semi-final. Rutecki was making his first appearance since last December.

Meyer Alper, Montreal, Que., showed considerable skill in a four round conquest of Johnny Balmer of Peoria.

Jimmy Diamico, Bill Rand A. C. junior welterweight, and Eu Eulien, south side 134 pounder, scored knockouts in preliminary bouts. Diamico floored Mario Christopher of the west side for the count and Eulien stopped Pete Forrand of South Chicago. Each contest ended in the third round.

In the opening fight Kelly Cohen, Peoria featherweight, beat Kenny Bell, former Quincy Golden Gloves sectional winner.

Fight Decisions

At New York—Sammy Angott beat Aldo Spoldi [10].

At Minneapolis, Minn.—Gunnar Barlund beat Otis Thomas [10]; Earl Peterson and Solly Stark drew [8]; Webster Epperson beat Joe Lindgren [6]; Curly Martin and Emmett Weller drew [4].

At Cedar Rapids, Ia.—Frankie Covelli stopped Tommy De Bello [4].

Calumet Farm—an Idyllic Picture of the Old South

BY HOWARD BARRY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Lexington, Ky., April 14.—Calumet farm, stretching across a thousand acres of gently rolling, lusciously green meadows, looks so much like an idyllic picture of a Kentucky estate that a vistor from the north might think the whole thing had come to life from some romantic book.

The white fences, the groves of grand old trees, the great house upon the spacious lawns, the immaculate stables, the training track, the colts frolicking in the paddocks—they're all there. But it isn't a picture—it's real and all the people and horses in it are real.

Farm Has Everything.

Calumet farm has everything that goes to make a great breeding and racing establishment. It has stallions who have proved their worth both as race horses and as sires. It has a collection of brood mares rated among the finest in the country. It has likely looking 2 years olds, and a great handicap runner in Bull Lea.

Its racing interests are handled by one of the country's most experienced and capable trainers—Frank Kearns. In the big stakes its thoroughbreds are ridden by a topnotch jockey—Irving Anderson. And over the entire establishment there presides an owner who takes enough personal interest to get up at 6 o'clock to see his horses gallop—even if he has to stand in the rain to do it. The owner is Warren Wright.

Caught in Rain.

Mr. Wright was standing near the rail of the farm's private track this morning as a frisky set of clean limbed 2 year olds pranced toward the starting gate where Kearns stood ready to teach them how to break from the barrier. As rain began to fall, Mr. Wright grudgingly withdrew to the shelter of the nearest stable, but he was out again before long to see Bull Lea breeze three-eighths of a mile through a downpour.

Although the Calumet people like to win races just as well as any one else, Mr. Wright stated that his greatest interest is in the breeding side of the project.

"We must race them to test our breeding theories and to establish the speed or staying qualities of our horses," he said, "but the track is primarily a proving ground as far as we're concerned."

Calumet farm has two horses, Temulac and Easy Mon, among the Kentucky Derby eligibles, but it is doubtful if either will start. Temulac is a son of Sir Gallahad III., out of Marching Along, the dam having been a daughter of Man o' War. His blood lines indicate that he should be able to go a long distance either in mud or on a fast track. He is not far enough along in his training, however, to earn the confidence of either his owner or trainer as a Derby prospect. Easy Mon, which is by Pharamond II., out of Slow and Easy, by Colin, is believed to be unable to go the Derby distance of a mile and a quarter.

The stable is concentrating on getting Bull Lea ready for the Dixie handicap at Pimlico. Then he will be shipped to Chicago, together with the entire Calumet string, to prepare for the Arlington Park meeting. After that the stable will move to Saratoga.

In addition to Bull Lea, which won the $50,000 Widener cup race at Hialeah, Calumet farm has sent Sun Teddy, Nellie Flag and Hadagal to the races in the past.

Three Farm Stallions.

Hadagal is now one of the farm's three stallions, the others being Chance Play and Bostonian, also famous in their day. Mr. Wright still owns Sun Teddy but that stallion is now standing at Henry Knight's Almahurst farms, near Nicholasville, Ky. Mr. Wright is a member of the syndicate which brought the famous Blenheim II. from England at a cost of $250,000. He owns a quarter interest in the stallion, which stands at the Claiborne stud near Paris, Ky. Blenheim II.'s first crop of American bred yearlings now are cavorting around Kentucky pastures.

Calumet farm's sixty-six brood mares include Nellie Morse, The Beasel, Slow and Easy, Toodleoo, Dust Whirl and Star Weed. The first two were particularly fast during their racing days. In selecting his mares, Mr. Wright takes into account both their blood lines and their racing records. Some breeders have a tendency to stress the importance of one factor at the expense of the other.

26 Two Year Olds.

Calumet farm will send twenty-six 2 year olds to the races this season. The list includes Star Chance, by Chance Play, out of Star Weed; Palsie, by Hadagal, out of Slow and Easy; Devil Red, by Sir Gallahad III., out of Dust Whirl; and That's Me, by Sickle, out of Katrina. All were foaled by Calumet's own mares.

CRIPPLED STAR GETS CONTRACT FROM COMISKEY

First Chicago Game Is Canceled.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

The unofficial city series, an event the Cubs and White Sox have been rehearsing off and on for several weeks, will have its local première at 3 o'clock this afternoon in Comiskey park—weather permitting.

The respective battlers—James Dykes' boys in this corner and Gabby Hartnett's National league champions in the other — were all set yesterday to reveal in Wrigley field what spring practice had or had not done for them but the weather wasn't suitable for the unveiling of athletes just out of sunny climes, so the whole thing was called off.

The delay not only changed the scene of the town's baseball opener, but also the pitching nominations. Instead of Bill Lee, the Sox today will face Gene Lillard, the comeback rookie. The Sox moundmen will be Ted Lyons and John Whitehead, in place of John Rigney and Jack Knott, as scheduled yesterday.

Stratton Is New Coach.

The freezeout of yesterday, however, didn't alter the pitching plans made by the respective managers for their season's inaugurals next Tuesday afternoon. Lee and Rigney were to be used in yesterday's battle as a means of providing them their last warmup prior to the start of the long championship struggles. But, despite the loss of their chance to tune up, they'll be in service Tuesday—Rigney against the Tigers in Detroit and Lee against the Reds in Wrigley field.

When the Sox go to bat for the first time today or whenever they go to bat for the first time, they'll have a new man coaching at first base. He won't be a stranger, however. It will be Monty Stratton, who lost his right leg last fall as the result of a hunting accident. Monty came to town yesterday preparatory to an appearance at the benefit game the Cubs and Sox are scheduled to play for him Monday and was pleasantly surprised when J. Louis Comiskey tendered him a coaching contract.

Sox Lucky, But Still Cautious.

The Sox came out of their training trip without encountering any of the assorted mishaps which in the last couple of years have hoisted their hospital bills into staggering figures. Manager Dykes, however, isn't inclined to boast about the sudden change in luck. He's afraid it might change back again. He does admit, with pride, that he might have a fair to middlin' ball team if he can keep his regulars in the first line trenches. He is protected two deep in some positions and that's better than he has been since he took over the job.

If the developments in the training trip games mean anything, Dykes made a master stroke when he captured Eric McNair from Boston for Boze Berger. Eric wanted to get away from Boston and was so concerned about being traded to Cleveland that he threatened to quit the game and go to work. Having landed with his former Athletic pal, McNair has and will continue to show his gratitude.

Lineup Is Set.

The Sox had a few minor aches scattered among some of their muscles, but when they returned yesterday morning all the cases were cleared up. Center Fielder Mike Kreevich stayed out of a few games to let nature work on a blister on his right hand. Marvin Owen was ordered to rest because he wasn't throwing naturally. He wouldn't admit his arm was sore, but Dykes soon detected a pushing throw. Luke Appling was taken out of one game for the same reason. They'll all be back at their respective jobs today.

In so far as he can tell now Dykes will go into the championship season with the same lineup he's had his mind set on for the last month. But something might happen any minute to make him change one thing or another. A few more hitting days by Gerald Walker might swing the ex-Tiger from the third notch where he's been batting, to the cleanup post. And if Hank Steinbacher doesn't hit, he might get orders to move out and make room for Larry Rosenthal in the outfield.

NEW YORK GOES TO THE RACES AT JAMAICA TODAY

Paumonok Handicap Is Opening Feature.

New York, April 14.—[Special.]—Thousands of New York racegoers tonight awaited the opening tomorrow of the Metropolitan racing season at Jamaica.

The mile egg-shaped oval of the Metropolitan Jockey club is in readiness to welcome what may be a record inaugural crowd. And Racing Secretary John B. Campbell has mapped out an impressive program to start the season.

As usual, the $7,500 Paumonok handicap, at six furlongs for 3 year olds, and up, will feature the opening card. This renewal gives every promise of being one of the best since the stake was inaugurated in 1906. Many Paumonok winners have gone on to undying turf fame.

The Chief Tops the Field.

The Paumonok also is a stepping stone to richer fixtures, not only for the older stars that may be pointed for such races as the Excelsior handicap, the Metropolitan and the Suburban, but also for candidates for the Wood Memorial and the Kentucky Derby.

Maxwell Howard's The Chief, trained by Earl Sande, heads the field of eight horses entered for the six furlong Paumonok. The Chief, high weight at 125 pounds, is a 2 to 1 favorite. Belair Stud's Derby hope, Johnstown, is expected to go to the post at 3 to 1. Mrs. W. Plunket Stewart's Early Delivery, which will be ridden by the reinstated Don Meade, also is 3 to 1. The other entries are Great Union, Pagliacci, Unselfish, Bold Turk, and Pontius.

Only Two Double Winners.

The history of the Paumonok is rich in color, and only two horses ever have won it twice. They were Red River, in 1907-'08, and Silver Fox, in 1926-'27. The inaugural running in 1906 went to Inquisitor. Zev, which won the 1923 Paumonok, triumphed in the Kentucky Derby that year.

The race record is 1:10 2-5, set by King Saxon in 1935, and it also is the track record for the distance.

William Ziegler's unbeaten colt, El Chico, which is the favorite for the Kentucky Derby, will add luster to the card. El Chico is expected to compete in the Restigouche purse. Among his opponents will be Mrs. Henry C. Phipps' Gilded Knight, a colt which gave a good account of himself in several stakes last year.

HAVRE OPENS TODAY

Havre de Grace, Md., April 14.—(AP)—A thirteen day racing meet, during which several Kentucky Derby and Preakness candidates will run, opens tomorrow at Havre de Grace with the $5,000 Harford handicap the first day's feature.

At least ten sprinters are expected to start in the Harford, a six furlong dash. Belair stud's Fighting Fox had top weight of 122 pounds, followed by Mrs. Louise Viau's Conquer with 121, Alfred Vanderbilt's Airflame 120, and Howard Bruce's Jay Jay 120.

Some of the topflight 3 year olds, eligible for the Derby or Preakness, both, have been working out here for some time in preparation for the $15,000 added mile and a sixteenth Chesapeake stakes, pre-Derby test to be run April 22.

Among the Derby-Preakness candidates being pointed for the Chesapeake are W. E. Boeing's Porter's Mite, W. L. Brann's Challedon, Hugh W. Jackson's Ariel Toy, Saratoga stable's Volitant, A. G. Vanderbilt's Impound, Brandywine stable's Deil and Ral Parr's Ebonito.

A SPARMATE TAPS LOUIS; JOE SHOWS HE'S IN TOP FORM

Los Angeles, Cal., April 14.—[Special.]—Dynamite Jackson let go with his right hand in the Main Street gym this afternoon and when his fist connected squarely with the jaw of Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis it touched off one of the finest two-minute brawls ever seen in a training camp.

Louis, caught completely unawares by the punch thrown by his 230 pound Negro sparring mate, was bent back almost double over the ropes. Wearing a fierce scowl, the champion bounced back hurling punches with both hands and in a moment the two giants were fighting furiously. Jackson finally backed away before the fury of the titleholder's bombardment.

Fortunately for all concerned the timekeeper ended the hostilities before anybody was hurt and the boys came back for the second round with plenty of vim but minus the obviously ruffled feelings revealed in the sudden gust of fighting in the first.

Louis is nearing peak form for his title battle with Jack Roper in Wrigley field here next Monday night.

Illinois College Rally Falls Short; De Kalb Wins, 8-7

Cocker Spaniel Puppies to Make Debut Tonight

BY BOB BECKER.

Scores of cocker spaniel puppies will be brought into the loop tonight to make their first formal appearance in a show ring. The occasion is the semi-annual puppy match of the Cocker Spaniel Club of the Middle West to be held in the Sherman hotel.

Paul Moser, president of the club, announced yesterday that the public is invited to attend this puppy match without charge. Owners of cocker puppies who want to find out if their pets are show prospects are invited to enter them in one of the classes. Entries will be accepted up to 8 o'clock. There is a 50 cent fee for entering a puppy in the competition.

Prof. Karl Leib of the University of Iowa, vice president of the Cocker Spaniel club and a well known spaniel breeder, will judge the puppies tonight. Following the judging he will discuss the various points of correct cocker spaniel conformation which enable a good dog to win in the show ring.

Visitors to this puppy match will see puppies varying in age from a few weeks to one year. They will be judged in classes for puppies up to 3 months of age, 3 to 6 months, 6 to 9 months, and 9 months to 1 year.

Five year old Peter Kahn of Wilmette combs his cocker spaniel in preparation for the cocker puppy match tonight. The dog's name is Bernina's Big Shot.

An extra feature of the evening will be a demonstration of cocker spaniels trained to hunt in the field. This exhibition of how cockers take commands will be given by Joseph Stipes of Highland Park between 8 and 8:30 p. m. One of the dogs to take part in this event is Stipes' Cricket, a field trial champion.

Another dog event on the calendar for this week-end is the field trial for pointers and setters to be run tomorrow at Culver Military academy, Culver, Ind., by the field trial club of that institution. Three stakes will be run.

Next week many Chicago dog fanciers will be going to Davenport, Ia., to show their pets in the ninth annual show of the Tri-City Kennel club. It will be held in the exposition building. Alf Mitchell of Chicago will judge all breeds. On April 23 the Midwest Puppy Match association will hold an all breed puppy match in the Sherman hotel. The judges for this event include Mrs. R. A. Crosthwaite, Mrs. George Hicks, Alf Mitchel, William Schafer, and E. J. Tyler.

Notre Dame, N. U. Renew Rivalry Today

Notre Dame, April 14.—[Special.]—Notre Dame's home baseball season will open tomorrow against Northwestern. There will be a return game in Evanston May 11.

The Wildcats defeated Notre Dame here last year, 5 to 3, in fourteen innings. Norvall Hunthausen, junior pitcher from St. Louis, probably will take the mound for the Irish.

The Wildcats, with ten lettermen on their squad of twenty-five, report that several veterans have been getting strong competition from sophomores. Northwestern has had the benefit of a southern training trip, while Notre Dame was able to get in only two weeks of outdoor drills.

ILLINOIS PARLEY CALLED TO STUDY MILK PROBLEMS

Various Interests Invited to Springfield.

BY HAL FOUST.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., April 14.—[Special.]—Lieut. Gov. John Stelle this afternoon called a conference for Monday morning in Springfield to discuss all aspects of the state's complicated milk problem. The call was approved by Gov. Henry Horner.

"Dairy farmers requested a meeting with the state administration," said Mr. Stelle. "We sympathize with the plight of the herd owners and will consider their complaints, but we must give consideration also to consumers, distributors, dealers, and union labor.

"Each of these groups will be heard at this meeting. The discussion may involve a legislative or an administrative proposal that would benefit the entire industry without increasing the costs to the consumers."

The producers are concerned over the shrinking market for fluid milk at present retail prices. The dairy farmers receive approximately 3.75 cents a quart for this milk, while they get only about 2.2 cents a quart for the surplus used in manufacturing.

Bill Would Set Up Board.

A main concern of the consumers is the retail price of home delivered milk. A bill to create a state price fixing board is pending. Such a board, when tried in eastern cities, increased the cost of milk to housewives.

As for the distributors and dealers, large companies in Chicago have reported financial losses. Labor has a problem in that milk wagon drivers are losing jobs because housewives are rebelling against doorstep prices. Invitations to Monday's meeting went to representatives of farm organizations, including Thomas E. Courtney of De Kalb, president of the Chicago Milk Producers' council.

Invitations went out also to Dr. H. A. Huehe of the University of Illinois College of Agriculture, to Mrs. Wilbur E. Fribley, president of the Chicago Housewives league, and to representatives of the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers. They will represent consumer interests.

Wagon Drivers' Leader Asked.

Paul Potter, secretary of the Associated Milk Dealers, Inc., said Chicago dealers will be represented by L. J. Janata, chairman of the association's committee on producer relations, and by Prof. Rawleigh Stone of the University of Chicago.

The distributors will be represented by Arthur Buehring and G. Van Buskirk of the Illinois Dairy Products association, and Charles Snow of a downstate dealers' committee.

Invitations were sent to Robert L. Fitchie, president of the Chicago Milk Drivers' union and to Frank Gillespie, president of the Inside Dairy Workers' union, to represent organized labor.

HIGH COURT UPHOLDS BAN ON PICKETING OF STORES IN MILK FIGHT

The milk wagon drivers' union of Chicago was restrained yesterday in a ruling by the Illinois Supreme court from picketing any of the retail stores selling milk of the Meadowmoor Dairies, Inc. The ruling reversed the action of Judge James F. Fardy in Cook county Superior court dissolving an injunction banning such practices.

Attorneys for the Meadowmoor company pointed out the company makes no deliveries of its milk, but that the milk is handled by independent vendors not directly involved in the union dispute with the dairy. The Supreme court ruled that the evidence indicated the union had interfered intentionally with the Meadowmoor company's business.

Picketing of the independent stores selling Meadowmoor milk was stopped last fall after attorneys for the dairy appealed from Judge Fardy's action.

SEEK SWINDLER OF WOMAN; LOSES HER LIFE SAVINGS

Warren avenue police began a search last night for a confidence man who swindled Mrs. Martha Makoneczky, 48 years old, 950 North Racine avenue, out of $2,435, her life savings. She named the man.

She said she met him eight months ago and that recently he told her of a chance to double her money by investing in drugs. On Wednesday she withdrew her money from a bank and turned it over to him, she said. He drove her to Washington and Ashland boulevards, told her to wait on the corner while he bought the drugs, and failed to return.

Melrose Park police yesterday arrested Mrs. Ida Naidenovich, 113 North 23d street, in the suburb, and her daughter, Valeria, 19 years old, on a charge of obtaining $300 in relief from Proviso township under false pretenses. The police were seeking Max Naidenovich, the husband. Township investigators said Naidenovich, a Russian alien, had been earning from $43 to $100 a month for the last several months and that Valeria had been getting $55 a month from WPA while the family was getting township relief money.

On March 30 the high school was warned that it will lose accredited standing unless it raises its standards. The North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools gave the school a year to make the recommended changes in administration and education.

LOSER IN DIVORCE BATTLE, HE KILLS LAWYER AND SELF

Greenfield, Ind., April 14.—(AP)—Charles L. Tindall, 62 years old, prominent Greenfield attorney, and Albert Swain, 47, Greenfield auctioneer, were wounded fatally in an altercation across from the courthouse here late today soon after Swain's wife, Eunice, obtained a divorce.

The men were taken to an Indianapolis hospital, where they died within a few minutes.

Sherif John Dent said Swain shot Tindall in the head with a 16-gauge shotgun and then shot himself in the abdomen. Tindall, former prosecutor and long time Democratic leader, had represented Swain's wife in the court proceedings. Swain became enraged because he was denied the custody of his two children.

CIVIL SERVICE BODY FIRES TWO CITY POLICEMEN

Two policemen were discharged yesterday by the civil service commission. Robert Greene of the bureau of criminal information and statistics was found guilty of having solicited a bribe from a motorist for destroying records of trafic violations. George Smith of the Englewood station was charged with conduct unbecoming an officer. According to testimony, he was shot during a quarrel with a woman friend.

A third policeman, William E. Flannery, also of the Englewood station, received a technical discharge because he refused to resign following a stroke of paralysis which incapacitated him. He is 61 years old and had served in the department for more than thirty years. The commission's action will not affect his pension rights.

SHOW WINDOW FAMILY SOON TO TRY OUT WINGS

The three baby canaries in the florist's window at the Insurance exchange are big enough now to learn to fly. And so Florist Allen H. Kauffman ordered a larger cage for them yesterday, that their parents may have room to show them how to use their wings.

The present cage was put in the lobby window of the building, at 175 West Jackson boulevard, six weeks ago. Above the cage door was the legend, "Mr. and Mrs. Canary." Mrs. Canary laid four eggs and office workers watched her sit on them. Two weeks ago, three of the eggs hatched. The birds' owner, Elevator Starter Edward Cuny, added a line—"And Family."

Proud Mr. Canary just works, works, works, picking up the bird seed and bits of hard boiled egg that Cuny puts into the cage. Very respectfully, Mr. Canary carries them to Mrs. Canary, who takes them away from him and drops them with her own beak into the babies' mouths.

CHARGES 'PLOT' TO NATIONALIZE ALL INDUSTRIES

Coal Man Assails Roosevelt Policy.

Kansas City, Mo., April 14.—[Special.]—Denouncing what he termed the drift toward socialism in Washington, Carroll B. Huntress of New York warned today that nationalization of industry is imminent "unless the brakes are applied shortly."

Carroll B. Huntress.

The Roosevelt administration, he charged, has already nationalized the coal and public utility industries, in addition to the railroads, which, he said, "have been bled white."

Huntress, eastern sales manager of the Republic Coal and Coke company of Chicago and former executive secretary of the National Coal association, delivered his warning at the annual convention of the Missouri Association of Public Utilities.

Problem Up to Voters.

Citing the three industries named as "horrible examples," he declared "the Washington conspiracy" will bring nationalization of all types of industry unless the "needless, wasteful, incompetent burocracy" is checked by the voters at the polls.

"The only remaining question," he declared, "is the ability of the voters to reach the ballot box before it has been removed."

The attack on the coal industry has been double barreled, he said, one thrust coming through "exorbitant" prices under the Guffey coal act, and the other through subsidization of hydro-electric plants. The Guffey act was dictated, he charged, by John L. Lewis, head of the Committee for Industrial organization and its affiliated coal miners' union.

Means Dictatorship.

"Government competition," he said, "precipitates government monopoly, which leads to political receivership, which is dictatorship." In colorful language he described federal competition as "unshirted hell."

"They sold their birthright for a mess of pottage and didn't even get the pottage," Huntress said of coal operators who originally supported the Guffey act, which was declared unconstitutional by the United States Supreme court in 1936. Similar legislation passed since then gives the national coal commission the power to fix prices, but the commission has not attempted to establish prices since early last year.

Condemning uneconomic hydro-electric power projects furthered by the national administration, Huntress charged:

"The coal industry stands to lose a market for over a hundred million tons, due to competition from the pretentious power program. Should such a market be taken from the industry, Mr. Ickes [Harold L. Ickes, secretary of the interior] would name his own price for the remaining properties.

Blames Lewis' Deal.

"Displacement of this amount of coal would throw 150,000 miners and railroad men on the bread lines, along with more than half a million dependents.

"Federal power plans could not have gained such headway had not John L. Lewis calculated that the politic way to promote the Guffey price fixing proposal was to cease opposition to the power scheme. It was a simple deal.

"Labor O.K.'d the dams, thereby signing the death warant for many mines, in return for active presidential support of price fixing, which dovetailed perfectly into the notions of the commissars of a planned society. That reprehensible transaction, a sell out of labor, is responsible for the present building of dams and closing of mines."

Citing the recent purchase of 8,000 acres of coal lands by a utility company as protection against "exorbitant Guffey prices," Huntress warned that other transactions of this type may follow, to the detriment of the commercial coal industry.

"Consumer owned properties are not subject to Guffey price control," he pointed out.

Washington Creates Jungle.

Criticizing over-regulation of business by the government, Huntress declared:

"Call it the law of the jungle, if you will, but nature in darkest Africa never conceived such a jungle as Washington has created throughout the United States. The coal industry needs more orders from customers and fewer orders from government. Coal asks no favors, but rightfully remonstrates against government subsidy to another energy source, electric power."

Huntress described Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska as the "ranking rabble rouser" in the group sponsoring hydroelectric projects.

Bankers' Acceptances Dip Less than Usual in March

New York, April 14.—[Special.]—The volume of bankers' dollar acceptances outstanding declined less than seasonally in March, the federal reserve bank announced today. The amount outstanding on March 31 was $245,016,675, a decrease of $3,078,509 from Feb. 28. Compared with one year ago the decline was $47,725,640.

Several Firms Earn More in First Quarter

Indications of improving business were contained yesterday in first quarter earning reports of several corporations representing varied industries. The improvement was not uniform, however, for a few companies reported less satisfactory results.

The Underwood Elliott Fisher company, a leading manufacturer of office equipment, announced net earnings of $560,163 for the first three months of 1939, compared with $557,440 in the comparable 1938 period. Earnings were equivalent to 76 cents a share in each period.

Improving operations in the automotive industry were reflected in the report of the Eaton Manufacturing company, which supplies parts for automobile manufacturers. Its first quarter net income was $725,999, equal to $1.03 a share. Operations in the first three months of 1938 resulted in a net loss of $199,042.

Mathieson Alkali Earns Less.

Net income of the Mathieson Alkali Works declined to $161,947 in the first three months, from $172,400 in the first quarter of 1938. Earnings per share were 15 and 16 cents in the respective periods.

The General Baking company, with plants throughout the east, reported for thirteen weeks ended April 1 a net income of $231,467, or 3 cents a share. This compared with $322,817, or 9 cents a share, in the corresponding period last year.

Reporting for the fiscal year ended March 31, the Lehigh Portland Cement company showed net earnings of $1,043,234, equal to $1.08 a share. In the preceding fiscal year the company earned $907,560, or 77 cents a share.

The Mission Oil corporation's 1938 report showed it received a larger return from its investments in petroleum enterprises, principally the Tide Water Associated, Skelly Oil, and Pacific Western Oil companies. Mission Oil's net income was $1,427,829, compared with $1,239,234 in 1937.

ASK U. S. WAIVE LIVE STOCK LOAN INTEREST DUE

Washington, D. C., April 14.—(AP)—The Chicago Producers Commission association asked Illinois congressmen to support a bill to waive government collection of approximately $7,000,000 in interest charges from live stock coöperatives.

The association said that unless the bill was enacted the Farm Credit administration must collect the money, under a ruling by the controler general, to the effect that the original interest rates on loans to the coöperatives by the old federal farm board were illegal.

The association said it consisted largely of northern Illinois producers and handled $30,000,000 worth of livestock last year for 50,000 members and patrons, about three-fourths of it coming from Illinois. It said that in 1930 "contracts providing for loans were entered into in good faith" with the then existing federal farm board.

AMERICANS SUE KRUPP FIRM FOR BOND PAYMENT

New York, April 14.—(AP)—The German Krupp munitions firm was accused in State Supreme court today of trying to prevent the collection of $330,000 due American bondholders by fraudulently assigning assets here to an Amsterdam bank.

The Pan-American Securities company, which said it owned $500,000 of matured Krupp bonds on which payment has been refused because of German exchange laws, sued to revoke Krupp's assignment to the Amster-Damsche Orediet Maatschappij of patent royalties due the Krupp firm from the General Electric company. The assignment was made on the pretext of being security on a $200,000 British loan, the suit said.

General Electric was named a defendant.

Automobile Output Gains Over Week and Year Ago

Detroit, Mich., April 14.—(AP)—Ward's Automotive Reports said today that output of the motor car factories for the current week would total 88,050 units, against 87,019 last week and 58,521 this week a year ago. It termed the advance "somewhat of a surprise," and attributed it to "minor changes in operating schedules," which were "not to be regarded as a trend."

OVER-COUNTER PRICES CARRIED BY NEW SERVICE

New York, April 14.—[Special.]—A system to facilitate dissemination of over-the-counter bid and asked prices has been organized under the name of Market Wire System, Inc. Formal approval for use of the system by member firms has been granted by the New York Stock exchange. The organization is headed by William H. Griffiths.

The company is described as a "privately owned one way wire system." The single sending station will be at the headquarters of the system, and receiving stations will be in the trading rooms of the New York security houses which elect to subscribe at a flat monthly rate. Other cities are to be connected later, according to present plans.

STORES' SALES RECORD BIG GAIN IN WEEK AS EASTER SHOPPING AIDS

National department store sales in the week ended April 8 soared 22 per cent over those of a year ago, the federal reserve board reported yesterday. Easter shopping was a stimulus. In the four weeks ended April 8, department store turnover averaged 9 per cent ahead of 1938.

Stores in the 7th federal reserve district [Chicago area] fared even better than the national average, with a gain of 27.6 per cent. Sales in Chicago gained 21.2 per cent. Detroit stores had 39.4 per cent more trade; Indianapolis, 38.2, and Milwaukee, 24.9.

Of the twelve reserve districts, the Atlanta, Ga., and Kansas City, Mo., areas led with gains of 38 per cent. None of the districts had less than a 13 per cent increase.

YOUNG DEMANDS BANK WITHDRAW FROM C. & O. RULE

Asks Guaranty to Turn Over Million Dollars.

New York, April 14.—(AP)—Removal of the influence of the Guaranty Trust company of New York in the management of Chesapeake & Ohio railway and affiliated properties was demanded tonight by Robert R. Young, chairman of the Alleghany corporation in a letter to the trust company.

Young called upon the trust company, which recently resigned as trustee for two Alleghany corporation bond issues to turn over to the successor trustees an estimated $1,000,000 of impounded income and deposited cash, and at the same time demanded the institution bring about the resignations of several individuals from the boards of the C. & O. and its holding company, Chesapeake corporation.

Several Resignations Asked.

Resignations asked by Young included Earl Baillie, John L. Dickinson, John B. Hollister, John P. Murphy, and C. L. Bradley, as officers, directors, and trustees in dissolution of the Chesapeake corporation. He asked "the immediately effective resignations of Baille, Hollister, and Dickinson as directors of the Chesapeake & Ohio railway, and such other directors as you or your agents may have been responsible for placing on the Chesapeake & Ohio railway board."

Renewal of Young's feud with the Guaranty coincided with the trust company's formal retirement today as trustee for Alleghany corporation 5 per cent bonds of 1949 and the 5s of 1950. The new trustees are Continental Bank & Trust company for the 5s of '49 and Marine Midland Trust company for the 5s of '50. Guaranty Trust remains trustee for the Alleghany 5s of '44.

May Improve Collateral.

Alleghany's desire for release of cash or income held by the trust company in excess of indenture collateral requirements was construed in Wall street circles as in line with Young's plans for improving the collateral position of the other two issues, under the new trusteeship.

Alleghany corporation's voting rights for large holdings of Chesapeake & Ohio were partially tied up last year by Guaranty Trust's assumption of voting rights as bond trustee on the basis of a collateral default.

ASSERTS CHEAP OIL WILL RUIN COAL INDUSTRY

Champaign, Ill., April 14.—(AP)—G. N. Blankenship, Centralia oil operator, today told the state legislative committee investigating the southern Illinois oil industry that "if we don't maintain the price of crude oil we're going to ruin the coal industry. Cheap crude oil means cheap coal."

He suggested that a senate appointed commission, approved by the legislative committee conducting the present hearing, could regulate drilling, plugging, spacing, and other phases. He supported a suggestion by L. A. Mylius of Vandalia that the regulatory power be given the Illinois state geological survey.

Most of today's testimony was devoted to plugging, prorating, spacing, offsetting, and factors affecting pipeline prices. Virtually all the witnesses favored some type of conservation which would have a stabilizing effect.

The committee will resume its hearing at 10 a. m. April 21 at Centralia.

Reo Directors Incompetent, Says Attorney

Detroit, Mich., April 14.—[Special.]—Present directors of the Reo Motor Car company are not qualified by experience to operate the concern, Attorney William H. Gallagher charged before Judge Arthur F. Lederle today at a hearing on the company's reorganization.

Gallagher, representing a group of stockholders, said only two members of the board have had manufacturing experience. These, he said were engaged in fields other than automobile making.

Vote on Board Tuesday.

The question of reëlection of the eight board members will be decided at a stockholders meeting Tuesday at Lansing.

Byron L. Ballard, attorney for the company, told the court a $2,000,000 loan from the Reconstruction Finance corporation would be necessary to carry out the Reo reorganization. He asked for and received permission for Theodore I. Fry, trustee, to delay submission of a reorganization plan until May 15. Fry was having an inventory taken and drafting a plan for the loan, he said.

Hupp Settles Tax Bill.

The Detroit city council today authorized settlement of the Hupp Motor Car corporation's $275,000 city tax bill for a cash payment of $125,000. S. L. Davis, president of the corporation, told the council that sale of 350,000 shares of common stock had been counted on for operating funds, but that "the foreign situation ruined the stock market."

If relief from overdue taxes were granted, he explained, the company would reopen its plant with what funds it has on hand.

SEC DENIES TWO QUIT BECAUSE OF INVESTIGATION

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 14.—[Special.]—The Securities and Exchange commission today issued a statement declaring that the resignation of two officials in the public utilities division had nothing to do with an investigation last fall of alleged misconduct by one of its officials.

Of the two officials, C. Roy Smith, director of the division, and L. A. Pettit Jr., assistant to the director, the SEC said that Smith was in no way involved in the investigation. Of Pettit, it said that it was untrue that he had been forced to resign because of charges of collusion with Victor Emanuel, New Deal financier, now chairman of the Standard Gas and Electric corporation. The commission repeated that it had cleared Pettit.

The intention of Abe Fortas, assistant director of the utilities division, to resign, was also reported today. He is slated to become general counsel of the Public Works administration. The present holder of that position, Carl F. Farbach, is expected to become director of the Bonneville, Ore., dam.

STATE, RATHER FEDERAL, RULE OF OIL URGED

Cleveland, O., April 14.—[Special.]—State control of oil is better than control by the federal government, except in emergencies, E. O. Thompson, chairman of the interstate oil compact commission and a member of the Texas railroad commission, declared here today.

Thompson defended the present state control system at the semi-annual meeting of the National Petroleum association. In attacking the recommendation of the energy resources committee which suggested increased federal regulation of the industry, Thompson asserted there "is no emergency in oil and that the state setup is better than control from Washington."

Standard Oil of Indiana Raises Industrial Fuel Oil

Standard Oil Company of Indiana will raise the tank car prices of residual fuel oils at its Whiting refinery by ¼ cent a gallon for Bunker C grade and 1/10 cent a gallon on the lighter grades, effective April 17. The advance is necessary, company officials said yesterday, because surplus stocks have been eliminated and demand is increasing. The fuels involved are used for industrial purposes. Domestic heating fuel prices will be unchanged.

ASK LAW TO BAN GOODS SALES AT LESS THAN COST

Chicago Retailers Support Measure.

An intensive drive to bring about enactment of legislation in Illinois that would make illegal the sale of goods at retail as less than cost is being made by trade organizations in the retail food industry.

Chester F. Hogle, executive director of the Associated Grocery Industries council, reported yesterday that plans are being made for a mass meetng of retailers in the Chicago area to line up support for the measure.

The bill sponsored by Hogle's organization and other trade associations that would outlaw the socalled "loss leader" method of merchandising is now pending before the state house of representatives. It was introduced last January by Representative Edward P. Saltiel, Chicago Republican.

Hold Meeting Next Week.

The house judiciary committee, of which Saltiel is chairman, is scheduled to hold a hearing on the bill in Springfield next Wednesday.

Delegations of retailers from Chicago and other parts of the state are planning to appear at the hearing to urge passage of the bill.

The Chicago mass meeting, at which attendance of several thousand persons is predicted, will be held next month at the Chicago Arena. Gov. Horner and Lieut. Gov. Stelle have been asked to speak. Stelle spoke at a similar meeting held by trade organizations in Springfield three weeks ago when he was serving as acting governor in Horner's absence from the state. Other meetings in the interest of the bill have been held in the principal cities of the state.

Confident of Enactment.

Hogle and other trade association sponsors of the measure are confident of its enactment. The purpose of the mass meetings, he said, is to stir up interest in the measure and educate retailers to terms of the measure so that they will be prepared to comply with them if the legislature approves the bill.

Besides Hogle's organizations the other influential trade groups that are supporting the bill are the Illinois Retail Gracers, National Association of Retail Grocers, the Chicago Cook County Retailer Grocers and the Coöperative Food Distributors of America. Among the leaders who are taking part in the campaign are J. Frank Grimes, president of the Independent Grocers Alliance, and F. H. Massman, president of the National Tea company.

The drive for the bill is coming almost wholly from the food industry. The terms of the bill, however, will apply to all merchandise sold at retail.

Patterned After Model Act.

Th bill introduced by Saltiel is patterned after a model act prepared by the National Food and Grocery Conference committee, a national organization that is supporting similar legislation in other states. The Illinois draft was revised slightly to conform to requirements of the state constitution. Similar laws are now in operation in more than a dozen states, the sponsors assert.

The proposed law is intended to eradicate the practice of retailers of using certain items to attract patronage to their stores. The practice is used widely, it is said, to bring in customers who may purchase other goods. Such items are sold at or near cost price, or even at an actual loss to the retailer.

Under the terms of the bill it would be illegal for any retailer to sell any goods as less than "cost" as defined in the act. The definition of retailer's cost given in the bill is the wholesale price, plus a minimum write-up of 6 per cent to provide retail expense of operation.

Until now no organized opposition to the bill has developed.

PLAN TO ABSORB STOCKS IN EVENT OF WAR DENIED

New York, April 14.—[Special.]—Executives of leading investment trusts having headquarters in this city denied today that they had participated in any way in a meeting alleged to have been held on Wednesday to discuss a plan for absorbing British and French holdings of American securities in the event of war.

According to the report, the meeting was held at the office of William S. Wasserman, who is listed as president of the Investment corporation of Philadelphia and the Delaware Fund, Inc. The office has no secretarial or clerical staff and was found closed today.

Officials of the SEC hastened today to deny that they had approved the plan. Speaking only for the SEC, officials said that neither the commission nor any of its members had given the proposal "any approval, blessing, or sympathy."

The reaction of the leading banks and investment trusts to the report was that such a scheme was unsound and undesirable.

Judge Lindley Will Hear General Motors Trust Case

Fort Wayne, Ind., April 14.—(AP)—Judge Walter Lindley of the eastern Illinois United States District court will hear the anti-trust case against General Motors and its affiliated finance company, District Attorney James R. Fleming announced today. The trial will be held at South Bend, Ind., probably late next summer or early next fall.

Heads Motor Coach

BENJAMIN WEINTRAUB.

Benjamin Weintraub, formerly executive vice president, was elected president of the Chicago Motor Coach company at a directors' meeting yesterday. Weintraub succeeds John Ritchie, who becomes chairman of the board.

John Hertz, formerly board chairman, was named chairman of the executive and finance committees. Morris Feiwell, vice president of the American National Bank and Trust company of Chicago was elected a director to replace Maurice Marwick, who resigned. All other directors were reëlected.

Associated with Allied Companies.

Weintraub has been associated with the Chicago Motor Coach company and its New York affiliates, the Fifth Avenue Coach company and the Omnibus corporation, for the last twenty years. He has been a representative of the company in transit unification proceedings in this city.

Weintraub said operations of Chicago Motor Coach in the first quarter this year resulted in lower earnings than in the corresponding period last year. The company does not issue quarterly income statements. Operations were profitable, however, Weintraub said.

Chicago Motor Coach, which is a wholly owned subsidiary of the Omnibus corporation, operates about 150 miles of bus lines in Chicago and Cook county. It operates under a franchise with the park district, and has no franchise with the city.

Plan Merger with Other Lines.

Under the traction unification plan now being worked out by city and company officials, the motor coach company would be merged with the Chicago Surface Lines and the Chicago Rapid Transit company [the elevated lines]. Weintraub said there had been no further development in unification plans.

Weintraub will continue to represent the company in unification proceedings. Ritchie, who is also president of the Fifth Avenue Coach company, spends most of his time in New York. Hertz, a partner in Lehman Brothers, also resides in New York.

BANK TO EXTEND AUTO LOAN PLAN TO OTHER ITEMS

Earl D. Amsler, president of the Citizens' National Bank of Waukegan, announced yesterday that a new credit plan started last week for automobile purchases probably would be extended to include other articles.

Under the plan the automobile purchaser obtains from the bank a letter of credit for 60 per cent of the value of a new or used car. The balance is represented by cash or his traded-in car. The dealer accepts the letter of credit and his part of the financing is completed.

This arrangement "relieves the dealer from continent liabilities and other financing problems—responsibilities which should never be his, because he has a sales organization and not a bank," Amsler said. "We expect to extend the service eventually to include washing machines, stoves, refrigerators, and other household units."

FARM MACHINE FIRM OFFICIALS SUED FOR MILLION

A stockholders' suit charging manipulation and misappropriation of approximately $1,000,000 was filed yesterday in Circuit court against directors and officials of the Advance-Rumely corporation, La Porte, Ind., former farm machinery and equipment manufacturer, and the Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing company.

The bill, filed on behalf of Mrs. Helen E. Nagle and Seymour Cohn, both of New York City, alleged that after the sale of certain Advance-Rumely assets to Allis-Chalmers in 1931, exorbitant salaries were paid to directors and officials, causing loss to the rights of stockholders.

It asked for an accounting. More than $100,000 also was spent for office space and expenses in the three year period before stockholders voted formal dissolution in 1935, according to the bill.

COAL SHORTAGE NOT IMMINENT, EXPERTS ASSERT

Disorders Break Out in Mine Areas.

A shortage in the nation's supply of soft coal is not imminent, experts in coal trade circles advised the Associated Press last night. Negotiations for settlement of the miner-operator controversy continued deadlocked, however, and new disorders broke out in various parts of the bituminous coal mining regions.

It was estimated that since the Appalachian mines suspended operations on April 1 there has been a drop of 4,000,000 tons in the available soft coal supply, which on that date was about 41,000,000 tons.

The bituminous coal commission, which prepares monthly reports on coal stocks, said it had no figures more recent than March 1, when the national supply was 39,300,000 tons in coal and retail yards. A commission spokesman said the average weekly consumption of bituminous coal at this season is 7,000,000 tons. He added that mines outside the Appalachian field are producing about 1,860,000 tons a week.

Chicago Has Plenty of Coal.

Chicago has a plentiful coal supply on hand and can fill every demand, Joseph D. Biety, secretary of the Chicago Coal Merchants' association, declared last night.

"We have plenty of coal in the city for both industry and the private consumer," Biety said. "When I read that Mayor La Guardia of New York was worried about the coal situation I was tempted to telegraph him that we had plenty of coal to send him. The Illinois mines are working and there can be no strike without a fifteen days' notice. In fifteen days we could get enough coal to last all summer."

Joseph Hock, president of one of the largest retail coal companies in the city, said his company had plenty of coal on hand.

Acts of Violence Reported.

Several acts of violence in the Pittsburgh district were reported by the Associated Press. J. R. Lightner, operator of a small mine forty miles north of there, said dynamite had been used to seal the entrance to his mine. State troopers arrested two men after an exchange of shots in an encounter between truckers and pickets seeking to stop the movement of coal at another nearby farm.

Fifteen women were arrested near Pineville, Ky., in the southeastern Kentucky coal fields, when they attempted to stop work at a nonunion mine. This has been the scene of many bitter encounters in previous coal mine strife. Pickets were reported to have beaten a mine worker in adjoining Harlan county.

1,000 Men in Picket Force.

At Clincho, Va., a picket force of more than 1,000 men was thrown around the Clinchfield Coal corporation's mine by the United Mine Workers of America. The mine was closed because of tenseness resulting from the union's efforts to organize the workers. The corporation is the only major producer of the area not affiliated with the union.

One of the largest coal companies in Western Pennsylvania, the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal corporation, notified approximately 1,400 employés that it was unable to meet its pay roll for the two weeks preceding the mine shutdown March 31. Posting notices at its Coverdale and Mollenaur mines after hundreds of workers had stood before the pay windows for several hours, the corporation said it hoped to resume operations "when financial difficulties are removed."

Largely because of the mines' shutdown, the University of Pittsburgh reported, business in the coal and steel district dropped 17 per cent last week in one of the largest declines in the last ten years.

Many Ask Settlement.

Numerous messages were sent to John L. Lewis, head of the miners' union, and to other delegates at the New York conference, urging prompt

New York Stocks.

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

New York, April 14.—Stocks worked lower today in the dullest session of the month. Many traders curtailed operations, fearing that the international situation again was nearing a dangerous stage.

Despite some recovery from early lows, the majority of leading issues closed fractions to about one point lower. Volume totaled 619,860 shares. Initial losses running to about 3 points reflected weakness in the markets abroad.

After starting on a weak note leading industrial shares hardened as the session progressed to shave early losses. Steels closed mostly fractionally lower. Chrysler, off 2¼ points at one time, closed with a loss of ½ point. Other motors also slipped fractionally.

Other pivotal industrial shares to close lower included United States Rubber, Anaconda, Goodyear, General Electric, Texas corporation, Standard Oil of New Jersey, International Nickel, and Montgomery Ward.

Chemicals showed losses running to 2 points in Allied Chemical. Aircraft issues closed mostly fractionally lower. Boeing and Consolidated Aircraft slumped one point each, however.

Rails and power and light shares patterned their behavior on the industrials.

LONDON, April 14.—[Special.]—Persistent continental selling forced prices lower on the stock exchange today. Paris and Amsterdam markets also were weak.

Prices on the Athens Stock exchange rose sharply on the strength of the British and French pledges to Greece and Rumania. There had been heavy declines the last few days. A general feeling of relief was noted.

New York Bonds.

New York, April 14.—(AP)—A small amount of selling today put the bond market fractions to around 2 points lower. Allowing for the losses, most corporate bonds closed well above the week's lows recorded early in the week.

Low yield bonds were favored in some instances and United States government issues ended with many gains ranging from 1-32d to 6-32ds.

Foreign loans moved unevenly, with issues of Japan, Bulgaria, and Canada showing modest improvement. German loans were mixed and those of Italy lower. Silesia province 4½s of '58 dropped to 18, off 8.

Chicago Stocks.

Prices on the Chicago Stock exchange eased in comparatively light dealings yesterday. Out of ninety-one issues traded, twenty advanced, fifty-three declined and eighteen remained unchanged. THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE average closed at 9.19 against 9.31 Thursday.

Midland United 6 per cent prior lien stock was the volume leader with a turnover of 3,900 shares. The stock closed unchanged at 4¼. Chicago corporation lost ¼ and Middle West fell ¼. Only Bendix Aviation, out of the ten most actively traded issues, advanced. This issue closed ½ higher.

Commonwealth Edison rights lost 1 cent but the stock closed unchanged. Volume amounted to 27,000 shares.

Bank Stocks.

Leading Chicago bank stocks declined yesterday in a thin market, dealers said. Losses ranged from $1 to $5. American National shares declined $5, Northern Trust $3, and City National, $1.

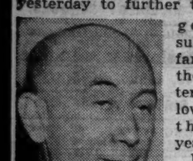
EXTEND DRIVE TO PROP BUTTER MARKET AGAIN

Dairy Officials Seeking Federal Aid.

Dairy officials met in Chicago yesterday to further their drive for governmental subsidization of farm products, as the price of butter rested at the lowest level in the last five years.



John Brandt calls dairy conference.

Despite the fact $43,000,000 or more has been spent during recent months in unsuccessful attempts to keep the price of butter up, the dairy representatives renewed their efforts to convince governmental officials that "stabilization" should be resumed. They sought extension of the program to include other dairy products.

John Brandt of Minneapolis, president of the Dairy Products Marketing association, called a meeting of dairy officials at the association's Chicago headquarters as a result of the stabilization demands made Thursday by another group of coöperatives. This group, the National Coöperative Milk Producers' federation, asked for federal appropriations running to millions of dollars to peg domestic prices and subsidize exports.

Details Not Revealed.

The meeting yesterday was attended by representatives of this group, the Agricultural Adjustment administration, and others. Specific recommendations, which must be approved by Washington officials, were not made public.

Yesterday's wholesale price of 92 score butter was 22½ cents a pound. The market has been in a highly unsettled state for several weeks since a governmental announcement early last month that stabilization efforts would be abandoned "temporarily." Since then, this grade of butter has sold as low as 21¾ cents.

The March announcement was issued by the Federal Surplus Commodities corporation, an agency which has distributed butter to state relief agencies. Since it has discontinued purchases in the direct market the surplus corporation has acquired part of the butter previously bought by the DPMA.

DPMA Spent $5 Millions.

The DPMA spent about $33,000,000 of government funds in purchasing 114,000,000 pounds of butter, much of it in the Chicago market, before it discontinued operations late last year. The FSCC picked up where the other agency left off, and bought another 41,000,000 pounds. At 25½ cents a pound, the "pegged" price maintained by the government for many months, the latter purchases would involve in excess of $10,000,000.

As a result of this program, Uncle Sam is now the biggest butter owner in the world. Of all the butter held in warehouses throughout the country, the government owns 91.8 per cent, or 72,355,000 pounds. The difference between this total and the aggregate purchases represents the amount distributed to relief clients.

Larger Stocks Expected.

Butter traders have expressed apprehension over the federal program, because the supply of butter in warehouses is the largest ever recorded and the market is now approaching another flush production season. After this month production normally exceeds consumption, so that the storage supply will probably increase still further to new records.

Meanwhile members of the dairy bloc in the national house of representatives pressed their efforts to get at least another $40,000,000 added to the department of agriculture's appropriation bill to remove surplus dairy products from the market.

Eggs for future delivery declined ¾ cent a dozen on the Chicago Mercantile exchange yesterday, returning to their previously established seasonal low marks. The cash market was steady.

NEED NEW LAW FOR SUBSIDIZING COTTON EXPORTS

Experts Hold Appropriation Also Is Required.

Washington, D. C., April 14.—(AP)—Farm administration lawyers were reported today to have ruled that a change in the 1938 farm law, as well as a congressional appropriation, would be necessary before the administration could carry out its proposal to subsidize exports of cotton from its loan stocks.

Legal advisers, an authoritative source said, informed Secretary Wallace that they believed the 1938 law barred release of government loan stocks before Aug. 1.

This development sent Wallace and agriculture department advisers to Capitol Hill for a conference with Chairman Jones [D., Texas] of the house agriculture committee and Senator Bankhead [D., Ala.].

Cotton Export Plan Opposed.

The administration already was confronted by strong opposition to the cotton export plan in the senate, but some officials had been of the opinion it could be carried out without further legislation. Officials had indicated, however, that the program would not be put into effect without congress' approval.

Meanwhile the state department advised farmers that the administration scheme to barter surplus American cotton and wheat to the European democracies for such strategic war materials as rubber and tin would not be allowed to depress prices of the farm products in this country.

The department said the administration "was not seeking to press American supplies into world markets." It emphasized that any stocks bartered would serve only as war reserves and would be used only in the event prices advanced to a fixed level.

Support of Congress in Doubt.

Administration hopes of winning congressional backing for the cotton subsidy proposal weakened as a consequence of discovery of the possible legal barrier.

The government could subsidize exports of cotton not under loan, but supplies outside loan stocks are very low and will not be augmented until the new crop is harvested next fall. More than 11,300,000 bales are stored in warehouses under loan.

The export plan, suggested by President Roosevelt, provides for farmer-borrowers to receive $1.25 a bale for selling to exporters title to cotton pledged under loan. The exporter then would acquire the cotton by paying the government a set price, perhaps equivalent to current domestic prices. The government would then mark the farmer's obligation paid. In addition it would pay exporters a bounty of 1 to 3 cents a pound on all sales made abroad.

PRICES ON FOREIGN MONEYS FOR DELIVERY IN THE FUTURE SLUMP

A sharp break in future prices of leading foreign currencies featured foreign exchange dealings in New York yesterday. Spot rates continued to show only minor fluctuations in terms of the dollar as various official stabilization funds gave their support.

The British pound deliverable in 90 days could be purchased at 2⅞ cents less than the spot pound, the widest discount in the latest series of European war crises. This compared with 2½ cents discount Thursday. The discount on the 90 day French franc and that for the belga to 0.58 cent and that for the Belga to 0.58 cent from 0.45 cent.

An estimated $4,500,000 in gold was received by the New York federal reserve bank from the Central Bank of Argentina. This was the first gold to arrive in New York from Argentina since last December.

LIFE INSURANCE SALES IN MARCH BELOW YEAR AGO

New York, April 14.—(AP)—New life insurance for March declined 4 per cent from March, 1938, but the 1939 first quarter total was 5.1 per cent above that for 1938, the Association of Life Insurance Presidents reported today.

The reports are based on returns of forty companies that have 82 per cent of the total life insurance outstanding in the United States.

The March, 1939 figure, was $645,019,000, compared with $672,142,000 in March, 1938. The three months' total was $1,945,447,000 against $1,850,714,000.

PALYI PREDICTS COLLAPSE OF PEGGED PRICES

Eventual collapse of artificially maintained American raw material prices was predicted yesterday by Dr. Melchior Palyi, economist for Stifel, Nicolaus & Co., Inc. He spoke at a luncheon meeting of the Chicago Association of Credit Men.

Dr. Palyi asserted that "the government can subsidize raw materials for a time, thus maintaining artificially high prices, but not for very long." He contended that when subsidization is abandoned American prices will break to world price levels. This, he said, will create a crisis in this country.

The overhanging world crisis, Dr. Palyi said, is created by "the world raw material situation and our policies, especially our agricultural policies." He said that the current troubled condition of Europe was a manifestation of this underlying economic difficulty.

COCA-COLA'S TRADE-MARK.

Investors' Guide: Being a stockholder in the Coca-Cola company I was pleased to learn from the 1938 report that Coca-Cola profits and sales last year were the highest in history. I have a question or two about some items in the report, however. The balance sheet shows that the company's "formulæ, trade-marks, and good will" are worth some $30,500,000 on a "cost" basis. How could these items have cost so much and to whom was the purchase price paid, if any one? I thought the company developed its own trade-mark and formulæ. Also what is the book value per common share of the stock and how does this compare with the market value?—L. N.

Answer: The present Coca-Cola company bought the assets, including formulæ, trade-mark, and good will, of the Coca-Cola company of Georgia in 1919. A substantial part of the purchase price went for the "intangible" assets that you ask about. According to accepted accounting practices, such intangibles may be valued at the price paid for them.

The company has also added to its intangible assets by buying up Coca-Cola bottling companies in various cities. These purchases include a price for good will and this cost price is added to the intangible assets of the parent company.

The book value of the common stock at the end of 1938 was only $7.70 a share, a small fraction of the market price, but as long as Coca-Cola is a going money-making concern the book value figure is practically meaningless as an indication of the worth of the stock.

The value of Coca-Cola stock depends on Coca-Cola profits, which depend on the continued popularity of Coca-Cola as a drink.

PROSPERITY, NEW IDEA.

Investors' Guide: I was glancing over the list of stocks on the New York curb and found a couple of company names that I'd never noticed before. The names are Prosperity company and the New Idea company, and these don't give me much idea as to the kind of business they are in. Can you tell me what each does?—B. M.

Answer: Both these companies have been in business for a good many years.

Prosperity Co., Inc., founded in 1915, makes more than 75 kinds of laundry presses. Used for pressing all kinds of suits and washable wear, the machines are sold to laundries, dry cleaners, clothing factories, hotels and chain stores.

New Idea, Inc., makes farm equipment, such as manure spreaders, hay rakes, hay loaders, corn pickers, and steel wagons. It began business in 1920.
